Two Kinds of Giving
More Worries in Europe
3000 Miles of Salt Water
A Robot Sea Captain

By Arthur Brisbane

OUR NATION is extremely generous. It is easy to give away money of the people raised by selling bonds. And giving causes a pleasant glow, when it costs nothing.

But our financier are "hard boiled" when it comes to risking their own money or that of their institutions, in Germany or elsewhere.

What money they have failed to withdraw from Germany, in the recent days of uncertainty, will probably stay there, since the President requests it. But for some time to come Germany and Europe generally will find it difficult to borrow in this market.

German industrial conditions are bad. Berlin fears that another million men may be out of work. The French, whose memory goes back to 1870 and Bismarck's five thousand million francs, will continue drawing from Germany all that Germany can give.

This country would like to help, if only to protect gigantic sums that Germany owes to private individuals and institutions here.

But it is difficult to suggest anything that the country can do. Curiously enough when nations are cutting each other's throats, it is easy to send over ten billions of dollars to prolong and help in war.

But, apparently, it is impossible to send even one billion to help a nation, struggling industrially.

Germany's financial worries cause general European worries. France plans concessions and assistance to Germany such as will bring the nations on the continent closer together, with France at their head, to offset what is called the "Anglo-United States bloc."

Great Britain does not like the idea of a continent united against her, with a great French submarine and airplane fleet aimed at Britain's shipping and big cities, and France, at this moment, draining England of her gold, $20,000,000 in a day, by airplane.

It is not what you might call a cheerful situation for any of the nations concerned.

This nation may be grateful that 3000 miles of salt water separate us from Europe's troubles. It is to be hoped that the United States will appreciate that separation and not be led into dangerous complications, not even in the effort to get back the millions that American financiers in spite of warnings have foolishly invested in dubious foreign bonds.

The 3000 miles of salt water may not be so important in another year or two.

Capt. Hawks, champion flier, two days ago ate his breakfast in New York, his luncheon in Havana, his dinner in New York on the same night, traveling over 2606 miles of salt water in 17 hours, three minutes.

With sufficient fuel he could have gone to Europe, within 24 hours.

If one flier, backed by a powerful oil company, can fly the ocean in a day, what will prevent a great nation from sending 5000 bombing and pursuit planes across the ocean in one day?

How long will it take to arrange that? And what would be left of our big cities after such a visit?

Would it be a good idea to stop worrying about Europe and begin worrying about the United States?

In London experimenis, a fleet of airplanes attacking the great British city from the coast and another fleet defending London. It was shown that London is practically defenceless. A comparatively small attack of 100 planes, such as was arranged, could destroy the principal buildings in London and thousands upon thousands of the population.

There is something worth thinking about.

One good feature of the European, American and other troubles is that You at least know what they are. We know that the squandering of money and blood in war, foolish extravagance and wastefulness that followed it, are responsible for our present condition.

When you know what is the matter with you, a cure is not so difficult.

A colored person, on the scaffold, asked if he wished to say any last words, remarked: "Yes, I want to and that I hope this will be a lesson to me the rest of my life."

Let's lope that war will be a lesson to the nations for the rest of their lives, and a lesson to the United States to attend to its own business, not inviting trouble by meddling with the business of others.

Off the California coast, near San Diego a United States destroyer, with no man on board, maneuvered at high speed, the

BULLETIN

New York, July 25—Stanley E. Faithfull, step-father of the late Starr Faithfull, appealed this afternoon by letter to Gov. Roosevelt for an audience at which he could present "certain facts."

Faithfull mailed the letter to the Governor's home here. He refused to make public the text of the communication.

New York, July 25—Private detectives, following a murder clue that may lead to the sumptuous yacht of a woman owner, have been retained by someone in Boston intent upon solving the mystery of the death of Starr Faithfull, neurotic Greenwich Village beauty and former Brookline, Mass., girl.

The yachtswoman is described as a rich patroness of young women of an exotic type. She is said to own a home on the Upper East Side, where Starr Faithful made many pilgrimages before her body was washed up on the shore of Long Beach.

Discovery of this tangent of the investigation came shortly after the dead girl's stepfather, Stanley E. Faithfull charged the Nassau County authorities with laxity and disclosed a document purporting to show that former Mayor Andrew J. Peters, of Boston, once paid $20,000 in discharge of all obligations to Starr and her family.

PETERS PLEADS IGNORANCE

Ex-Mayor Peters, socially and politically distinguished in Massachusetts, was reached by telephone at his summer home in North Haven on an island off Rockland, Me. When informed the text and photostatic copies of the alleged general

Two Bodies Found as Police Probe Strange Death Cases of Deep

Investigation of three mysteries of the deep today brought the disclosure that Mrs. Margaret Fredericks, 23, of 200 Columbus ave., South End, leaped to her death last night from the steamship Boston en route from here to New York.

A body, believed to be hers, was recovered in Buzzards' Bay today and taken to New Bedford, where her husband, Frank Fredericks, will view it. Her reason for taking her life is a complete mystery to her husband.

FALL WITNESSED.

Another body, that of a man about 40 years old, which fell apparently here in the water at least a week, was found near the same spot, of the Round Hill estate of Col. E. H. R. Green at South Dartmouth.

This body gave the authorities a second mystery, while the disappearance of Robert E. Graves, young society millionaire, who vanished from the steamer New York between Boston and New York,

26 Aged Folk Meet Death Amid Flames

Pittsburgh, July 25—Faith that did not falter even in the face of death held many of the 280 inmates of the Little Sisters of the Poor Home for the Aged in the blazing structure last night and even prompted some to fight off those who groped through the blinding clouds of smoke to rescue them.

Today 26 of the old and enfeebled inmates had gone to their deaths.

Two hundred and seventeen others were rested in hospitals, many of them burned, most of them laboring to recover from the smoke and heat that felled them, some of them so weakened by burns, smoke, heat and the terror of the night that it was feared they could not recover. Fifteen were unaccounted for. Only three of the dead had been definitely identified.

There was only a feeble fight for life as the great plumes of smoke rolled from the four-story building and red flames ate their way toward their victims.

"IT CAN'T BURN."

Some calmly, some confused, some with a prayer on their lips, the aged and infirm hesitated—waited in prayer.

"This home can not be burned," one aged woman cried as firemen took her by the arm. She clasped a crucifix to her breast.

Helped to the long hallways, where the roar of the flames rolled nearer and nearer, and where the smoke rapidly was choking off the only avenues of escape, they waited these feeble ones who had found haven from the world in "the Home." Clasping images of the Virgin Mary and the Child, others mumbling their beads. Only a few more than 100 allowed themselves to be removed to the streets.

Others refused to leave, even fighting against rescue. One aged man struck a rescuer who had climbed a 30-foot ladder to a window where he stood. The rescuer fell to the lawn below, but, unin-

It was grapefruit.

FAITHFULL ACCUSES EDWARDS OF BLOCKING PROBE

STARR'S FATHER CRIES GIRL VICTIM OF MURDER PLOT

release had been published in the papers, he said:

"I don't know anything about it. I am vacationing on the coast of Maine, and it will be some time before the papers reach me. Until I see them I wouldn't venture any statement."

He declined an offer to have the document read to him on the ground that he would not be interested, and when informed that the alleged general release was given in consideration of the sum of $20,000, he stated:

"I see. But please excuse me from saying anything until I have a chance to see the morning newspapers."

Mr. Peters, Miss Faithfull's stepfather also offered photostatic copies of a hotel register bearing the name of 'Mr. A. J. Peters' and 'Miss S. Peters,' and showing that they were assigned to adjoining rooms.

"I would have to see that before I would make any statement," said Peters.

"Won't you say anything?"

After a brief hesitation, Peters replied:

Determined to force the reopening of the entire investigation, Faithfull sent an ultimatum to District Attorney Elvin N. Edwards of Nassau County yesterday from his home at No. 12 St. John's pl.

"I will give the district attorney until noon tomorrow to prove that he is making this investigation in good faith, he told reporters in the presence of the girl's mother, Helen MacGregor Faithfull, former wife of Starr's father, Frank W. Wyman of Boston.

INSISTS ON MURDER

"My daughter was murdered," said Faithfull angrily. "There is a motive behind every murder—and I know the motive behind the assassination of my daughter.

"I shall never stop until the murderers pay for their crime.

"I am putting an unchangeable deadline for the incompetent and negligent officials who have made a botch of the whole investigation.

"This deadline is high noon tomorrow—Saturday.

"Starr was kidnaped in New York city.

"She was criminally drowned within the jurisdiction of Dist. Atty. Edwards of Nassau County.

"Unless the police of New York city and the prosecutor of Nassau convince me by noon tomorrow of a complete change of their tactics, and of a new sincerity and intelligence in the search for the slayers of Starr, I shall take the necessary steps to have the case taken out of their hands and put in the hands of authorities who will solve the crime."

CHARGES CONSPIRACY

"I now and here charge that part and parcel of the whole conspiracy to befoul my dead daughter's reputation and character has served to divert the hunt for the real criminal or criminals.

"And I charge that Edwards has not been above lending himself to the campaign of vilification, a campaign that has centered public interest on my misdemeanor of a misled and betrayed young girl and removed it from the target it should have been aimed at—the discovery and punishment of those who killed my daughter.

"Let the shore you how the case has been mishandled, wilfully and deliberately and so far successfully.

"In the first place, Starr was never taken off the Franconia at 5 o'clock the afternoon of Friday, May 29, and removed to the wharf on a tug.

"The police got a thorough description of the woman who really was removed. This woman had on a blue skirt, such as Starr never owned in her life, and a white shirtwaist. This woman was drunk and had apparently simply stayed too long on the departing liner.

"Mr. Duncan Smith, who lives in the apartment on the first floor of this address—I live on the top or third floor—admitted Starr that afternoon about 3 o'clock.

WAS NOT INTOXICATED

"She was not intoxicated. Her clothing was not disarranged, and she was entirely calm and collected.

"When Mr. Edwards and Inspector of County Police Harold King first came to my house after the body was found, I showed them the dress Starr wore that Friday. It was on the hanger where she had placed it—a black silk frock with a white trimmed collar.

"I told them then that I did not believe Starr had ever been put off the Franconia, hysterical and drunk; and I begged Edwards to subpoena Mr. Smith before the grand jury.

"But Edwards not only disregarded my protests about the Franconia incident, but never did call and neighbor to testify under oath before the Grand Jurors.

"Edwards has all along deliberately sought to make it appear that there was a disagreement, even a quarrel, between my daughter Tucker and myself as to the suicide letters.

"I have maintained from the first that these letters were fraudulent and never were written by Starr. Regardless inside Tucker believed them genuine.

"The truth is that when Tucker was before the Grand Jury Edwards handed her the three disputed letters and one genuine one concerning which there has been no dispute. And Tucker immediately and unhesitatingly branded the 'suicide' letters forgeries and the other one as really in Starr's handwriting.

HARING IN BOSTON

"As to what became of Starr on Friday, June 5, when she left home for the last time, I have given Edwards my theory until I am blue in the face, and he has yet done anything to see if I am right or wrong.

L. Vreeland Haring, the expert who told Faithfull that Starr did not write the suicide letters, departed yesterday on a secret mission to Massachusetts. Faithfull would not discuss his abrupt and unexplained trip north.

Texas Guinan declared yesterday that she was well acquainted with former Mayor Peters of Boston, and that he often was a welcome guest in her clubs.

NEW REVELATION

"He was a good spender, and I have seen him with Starr Faithfull a number of times," la Guinan told a New York newspaper last night. "Peters was a regular guy, one of our best suckers. He brought Starr to the Argonaut last winter when I was located in Lynbrook, Long Island, and believe me he spent plenty on her. She was a lovely girl, but I never would have got the idea that she was so young and unsophisticated that she didn't know what it was all about."

Starr's last entry in her famous diary is January of 1928, and any subsequent meeting she may have had with Peters would not be recorded there.

Tex Guinan, however, was positive that they had spent a number of pleasant hours at her Lynbrook establishment no longer ago than last winter.

EDWARDS' ANSWER.

"The case of Starr Faithfull's death hasn't been closed and won't be," the prosecutor said last night. I believe the girl was murdered. I believe the suicide letters are genuine, one handwriting expert being about as good as another and all of them being able to find in disputes writing whatever is wanted by the principal who hires them.

"Though I believe she wrote of her intention to end her life, I don't believe she did. I think she was killed, from the very nature of her death.

"But I don't know who killed her and I will welcome any evidence anybody can give.

"Faithfull intimates somebody killed the girl, or had her killed, because her life was dangerous to his peace and tranquillity. Why beat around the bush? He means Jacobs—and nobody else.

"I don't believe Faithfull is right. But assume he is, and Jacobs had a motive to kill her. What of it? Motive isn't evidence in a court of law, and until Faithfull or anyone else can give me genuine evidence, I can't act upon it. There is nothing else.

"There is not the slightest scintilla of evidence to connect ——— in any way whatever with the death of the girl.

WILL ACT ON EVIDENCE

"Neither ——— nor anybody else is so highly placed that I won't proceed against them if I get any evidence that he or they are involved criminally in the girl's death.

"Why should I be accused of a sinister motive when I claim the suicide letters are not fakes? If I believe she was murdered wouldn't it support my stand if I found these letters were forgeries by some master mind?

"The death of Starr Faithfull never will be a closed case to this office until a solution of that death is obtained, whether it was suicide, accident or murder."

Meanwhile, Dist. Atty. Edwards yesterday was studying the report of the noted handwriting expert, J. Vreeland Haring, declaring that Starr's supposed "suicide note," received by Dr. Jameson Carr, ship's surgeon, was a forgery.

CALLED FORGERIES

It was in this note that Starr was purported to have written of an intention "to end my worthless disorderly bore of an existence."

Three of four notes received by Carr already have been branded as forgeries by Starr's sister, Tucker. The one note upon which the authorities relied most to support a theory of suicide is described by Haring as:

"A crude simulation or imitation of a few of the many penmanship habits of the writer (Starr).

Dist. Atty. Edwards, reiterating that he regards Starr's death as homicide, denied vigorously Faithfull's accusation that he had dropped the case because there was somebody in it "too big to tackle."

"The case is still open," said Edwards.

Discovery that private detectives were working on a yachting clue led to reports that Jerome A. Jacobs, former law associate of the late William Fallon, had been retained to take charge of this part of the investigation.

In his offices at No. 140 E 42d st., Jacobs refused to deny or confirm this, but lent credence to the report by saying that "consult" would be a better word than "retain."

Asked if Frank Wyman, Starr's father, was the "someone in Boston" Jacobs reiterated that he had nothing to say.

BATTLE OVER DIARY

A report that the supposed yachting party was being investigated also crept out of the Faithfull home, but Faithfull would not discuss it. According to this report, the girl's diary is not owned by a woman, but by a man, and was seen in port on June 8, the day Starr's body was discovered.

A hot controversy threatens over Dist. Atty. Edwards' assertion that he had reached an agreement with Faithfull to burn the dead girl's diary. Faithfull denied that he ever agreed to have the diary burned and said he had demanded it back. It has not yet been returned.

It is understood that Edwards wishes to have the diary burned in order to prevent "innocent persons," named in the diary, from being drawn into the scandal.

WRITING MAY HOLD KEY TO STARR'S DEATH

Tucker Faithfull, sister of the late Starr Faithful, is shown examining specimens of her sister's handwriting on which members of her family, claiming the girl was murdered, are basing their fight to have the death investigation reopened. Members of the Faithfull family claim that suicide letters alleged to have been written by Starr are forgeries.

GIRL IS DEAD IN SEA MYSTERY

Thursday night, also remains unsolved.

A passenger on the steamer Boston, shortly before 10 o'clock last night, saw Mrs. Fredericks climb the rail on the starboard side of B deck and then fall backward into the water. A. W. Rooms, the ship's purser, said today in New York.

The vicinity was searched for some time and a radio flash was sent out, bringing Coast Guard boats to the hunt this morning.

Shortly after daybreak the body of a girl was found. She was dressed in new clothing and her wrist watch was stopped at 9:55. She was fully clad except for her stockings and one shoe. There was a deep gash in the head.

A letter from a man was found in Mrs. Fredericks' stateroom aboard the ship and, according to her husband, she received a letter yesterday which she said a man wrote for her sister.

"I came home from work yesterday morning and my wife said she was going to visit her sister in New Jersey," said Frederick, before starting for New Bedford today.

"We had been married two years and were happy. The description of the body found in Buzzards' bay tallies with Margaret."

The couple had no children.

The body of the man which the Coast Guards recovered is evidently not that of Graves.

IN MYSTERIOUS TRIP

Meanwhile the disappearance of young Graves, who went aboard the steamship New York here Thursday night and was not on it when the vessel docked at New York yesterday morning, remained a mystery with several confusing angles.

Graves, according to his family, returned two weeks ago from a world cruise but did not go near them. Instead he came to Boston on a mysterious errand and did not stop at any of the larger hotels.

His father, Robert N. Graves, a wall paper manufacturer, said his son was to have become an officer in his corporation on the first of next month.

He was married but was estranged from his wife.

Free Ice Descends On Grocer in Form Of Hailstones

Samuel Borelli, who runs a small store in Brookline st., Cambridge, has an electric refrigerator, but he's not averse to picking up a little free refrigeration.

Borelli today had on exhibition 40 hailstones from a quarter to a half an inch diameter, which he picked up in the street outside his establishment after the storm which swept Cambridge last night.

Although the heaven-sent gift of ice came to him at no expense, the storekeeper was forced to resort to his mechanical icebox to prevent their fading overnight.

3909 Bitten by Dogs in State This Year

That 3909 persons were bitten by dogs in Massachusetts from Jan. 1 to July 23 was revealed today by Dr. George G. Bigelow, state commissioner of public health.

This is compared with 5317 bites from dogs reported from Jan. 1 to July 31 in 1930.

Postmaster Praises Safe Truck Drivers

Seventy-five letter carriers and 73 driver-mechanics, assigned to the operation of government owned trucks, have been commended by Postmaster William E. Hurley for not being involved in an accident of any description during the fiscal year that ended July 30, it was announced today.

STRIKE HALTS WORK ON NEW POSTOFFICE

Row of the Hoisting Engineers May Cause Walkout of Other Workers; Mayor May Act

Construction work on Boston's long awaited new postoffice today remained at a standstill while union heads wrangled over the prerogative of unloading structural steel in the railroad yards.

A conference called to bring the labor dispute to a peaceful ending resulted in a deadlock, with the prospect that remaining union labor on the job may join hoisting engineers in a general strike until the difficulties are settled.

TEAMSTERS IN DISPUTE

Present at the conference, held in the building site, was John W. Coakley, president of the Massachusetts Trucking Company, who claims that his employers, members of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters, the sole right to unload and haul the steel for the new postoffice.

John Dewire, representing the hoisting engineers whose claim that the teamsters were infringing on their jurisdiction, opposed the claim of Coakley.

While the two unions deny each other's rights to the hauling job, structural iron workers and other union employes are kept idle on the job.

CURLEY AWAITS RESULTS

Representatives of the general contractors, the structural iron workers and the B. & M. Railroad in whose yards the iron awaits transportation, declared themselves in readiness to resume operations when the question of jurisdiction was settled.

Mayor Curley said he will await results of the proposed conference before interfering.

PLOT ON KING ALBERT BARED

Brussels, July 25 (AP)—The newspaper L'Etoile Belge said today an attempt against the royal family was made Sunday on the occasion of the inauguration at Ostend of the Leopold statue, erected to commemorate the centenary of the dynasty.

The main beams of the royal inclosure were sawed with the intention of causing it to collapse under the weight of the members of the royal family, government officials, the paper said.

YD RETURNS FROM CAMP

A general exodus from military camps of 1931's first contingent of New England citizen soldiers today marked the ending of the first two-week training period. As the outgoing troops left their training camps they were replaced by new detachments moving in for two weeks' work in the field.

More than 8000 troops of the 26th Yankee Division, comprising infantry regiments and their complimentary field artillery, medical and transport units today turned from Camp Devens to their successors, the 110th Cavalry, M. N. G., under Col. Dana T. Gallup, and the 102d Field Artillery, M. N. G., commanded by Col Roger W. Eckfeldt.

The cavalry regiment includes a headquarters troop, two squadrons of two troops each, a medical detachment and a band.

Both these regiments are units of the 26th Division, but were unable to train with the rest of the division, because of the scarcity of horses.

The Air Corps of the 26th Division moved into the Cape Cod airport, Barnstable, for a 15-day tour of duty. Led by Maj. Louis E. Boutwell, the outfit's planes took off from the Boston airport this morning. They were preceded by the organization's 100 enlisted men and equipment in truck trains and buses.

This unit will co-operate with the 211th Anti-Aircraft Regt., 67th Corps of Cadets, encamped nearby at Sandwich, and the 297th Coast Artillery, based at Portsmouth, N. H.

The anti-aircraft unit, under Lieut.-Col Harry L. Spencer, traveled to camp on a special train out of the South station this morning.

THE REST OF THE NEWS

Washington, July 25 (AP)—Free taxi rides, paid for only by a tip, stood forth as a possibility today as the local motor cutting war among cab operators raged.

PAY DAY CRISIS NEW PERIL IN GERMANY

Visit of Stimson and MacDonald Holds Scant Hope of Relief; Banks Face Run

Berlin, July 25 (AP)—While official Germany prepared today to play host to statesmen of the United States and Great Britain, ordinary citizens worried about payday.

At the end of the month, when pay day is supposed to come, the Reichsbank will have to meet payments of 2,000,000,000 marks (about $48,000,000). Civil servants have been informed by radio that they'll get only half their due on July 31, with the rest to follow in 10 days.

CRISIS FOR BRUENING.

The enormous demand on the Reichsbank gave rise to universal debate about whether the cash would be available to pay off the nation. Citizens who have been skimping along with little money hope for the best.

Payments of weekly wages are to be staggered so that demands for cash will not hit the banks all together.

A week crowded with important conferences faced Chancellor Bruening and Foreign Minister Curtius on their return from the seven-power conference.

First they had to make a report to President Paul von Hindenburg and then get together with the cabinet about measures to keep Germany going during her period of economic stress.

In addition, the heads of the government looked forward to conference with Secretary Stimson and Prime Minister MacDonald and Foreign Secretary Henderson of Great Britain.

HOLD CONFERENCE.

Bruening and Curtius returned today from the seven-power conference and immediately proceeded to the presidential palace to report to the aged President, von Hindenburg.

Then Bruening hastened to the chancellery for an urgent cabinet session at which Germany's plight was discussed.

Hancotte questioned the youth and took him to Charlestown police station when he was unable to give a satisfactory explanation of where he got the car. Police held Gilbert after they said, they learned the car was stolen from Albert M. Day of Dowling st., Dorchester.

IN CITY HOSPITAL

Two other firemen sustained deep cuts, lacerations and bruises about the legs and were taken to the City hospital for treatment.

The other firemen injured were: Richard A. Ash, 30, of 49 Seaver st., Charlestown, sustained contusions of the back and a sprained right ankle.

Lieut. Doyle was rushed to the City Hospital unconscious. Officials there say he suffered a serious leg injury and possible internal injuries.

The fire engine, from Engine Company 22, operated by Edward J. Galvin, of 49 Seaver st., Charlestown, was proceeding east at a high rate of speed in response to an alarm turned in from a box at Newbury st. and Charlesgate East.

The truck was being operated by John N. Stearns, of 480 Union st., Springfield, and was running north on Dartmouth st.

BLIND CORNER

Approaching the blind corner it crashed full tilt into the speeding engine. Both machines were badly damaged.

BOY AUTO THIEF HELD IN LYNN

The appearance of Arthur Parquette, 16-year-old auto theft "expert" in Salem court today brought out the fact that he had duplicated in New York the wild escapade in Lynn that caused a wide search for him and his ultimate arrest.

Parquette fled to New York after he escaped pursuing police in a stolen auto by running through the South Middleton woods on foot. During the chase more than 12 shots were fired.

He was arrested in New York in a car he had stolen and extradition proceedings brought him back to this state to face trial for larceny.

Inspectors Otis Lyons and Charles Duggan, of New York, who brought the boy back, stated he had struck a taxicab in that city, injuring a woman, and crashing off. After a chase they said, he was captured. A charge of entering the state in a stolen car was dismissed so that he might be returned to this state.

In court today, it was discovered the boy is only 16 years old and for that reason he was held in $5,000 for the juvenile session, Wednesday.

FIVE KILLED IN PLANE CRASH

Cass Lake, Minn., July 25 (AP)—Five persons were killed last night when the airplane on which they were riding fell a few feet from friends to whom they were waving as the pilot swung low.

The dead are: Dr. Charles C. Gault, 38, of Owantonna, Minn.; the Rev. Lawrence J. McHugh, 35, of St. Mary's College, Winona; the Rev. J. J. Stapleton, 34, of St. Mary's parish, Waseca; A. B. Conrad, 24, of Rochester, Minn., pilot, and Ralph Auek, 10, of Cass Lake.

The accident occurred when the pilot, seeing the plane was losing altitude fast, apparently zoomed too quickly, causing a wing to crumple. The plane turned over and crashed, upside down, directly in front of the Gault cottage on Cass Lake.

Mrs. Gault and her two children stood near the cottage waving to the husband and father in the plane when the accident occurred.

MRS. ESTORNELLE

Robert McKenna, three-and-one-half-year-old son of Anne McKenna, Camden choir singer, was the storm center in divorce suit of the Rev. Camille Estornelle and Mrs. Florence H. Estornelle. Miss McKenna declares the Rev. Estornelle is the father of the child. (International Newsreel photo.)

Both pleaded guilty, Del Castro receiving a suspended sentence of three months in the House of Correction and his wife placed on probation.

It is alleged that Del Castro and his wife had $2500 in an East Weymouth bank at the time of receiving help from the unemployment fund.

Selectman William A. Hannaford, of Weymouth, who brought the charges against the two, stated an investigation of 14 other similar cases will be started soon.

APACHE CHIEFS SUMMONED IN KILLING

Girl, Discovering Ancient Customs, Found Strangled in a Ravine

White River Indian Reservation, Ariz., July 25—Secret tribal customs of the Apache Indian were believed by authorities today to hold the key to the death of 23-year-old Henrietta Schmerler, Columbia University student, whose body was found in a ravine near Fort Apache yesterday.

Convinced the young woman was slain, although the coroner had yet to make his report, special officers of the reservation called chieftains of the tribe into conference as the investigation progressed.

Miss Schmerler, a student of ethnology and anthropology, had lived alone in a cabin near the reservation for a month. She had been gathering material for a thesis on the Apache history and mode of life.

LEARNED SECRET RITES

In her studies authorities believe, she came upon the guarded secret rites of the once fierce tribe of the Southwest and in so doing aroused the enmity of its members.

A 23-year-old Indian buck, Claude Gilbert, was held for investigation in the case. Two other Apaches, whose names were not revealed, also were being held.

Miss Schmerler's body bore no marks of violence, a cursory examination revealed. She apparently had been either strangled or smothered, and the clothing torn from her body.

While the mountains shook with thunder and lightning streaked an inky sky during a tremendous storm yesterday, a sheriff's posse stumbled upon the body of the girl in a gully four miles from the Apache reservation at White river.

NATURE AIDS SLAYER

Nature aided the murderer. The deluge that started falling a few minutes before searchers came upon the body washed away footprints in the soft soil and other possible clues which would have aided Indian scouts and trailers.

Her body will be examined to determine if she was attacked.

Miss Schmerler disappeared Saturday from the little cabin near the reservation where she lived since coming from Columbia to study the Indians, their religion and customs for a thesis as part of her work for an advanced degree.

3 BREAKS NET THIEVES $1100

Safe crackmen robbed the offices of two Quincy coal companies early today of $1123 in cash, and tried to blow open the safe in the Dedham Custom Laundry, East st., Dedham.

The identical method of procedure in the two Quincy breaks indicate that the two breaks were the work of the same band of thieves, according to police. The Dedham "job" was a different one.

The rear door of a shed adjoining the offices of F. H. Crane & Co., in Penn st., Quincy, was jimmied, another door to the offices forced, and the safe wrecked by knocking off the combination. The robbers took $1000.

At the offices of the Quincy Coal Company, a quarter mile away in Penn st., by the same means of entrance and opening the strongbox, the robbers obtained $123.

At the Dedham laundry, after boring holes in the door and stuffing these with nitro-glycerine, the robbers were frightened away by the approach of a policeman. There was $200 in the safe.

MOTHER AND 2 BABIES DROWN

Providence, July 25—An 18-year-old mother and her two small children were drowned in early today in Twin Rivers when the auto in which they were seated plunged through a guard rail and into 12 feet of water.

Their bodies were recovered by a State trooper, who dived into the stream for three hours before all three were brought to the surface. The woman was identified by a gas bill found in her handbag.

The victims were Mrs. Leah Landeville, 18, of Newell ave., Pawtucket, and her two children, Theresa, 3, and Dona, 1½ years old.

According to State police, Tony Polana of Pawtucket, driver of the car told them he had met the woman and her two children and she asked him to drive them to inspect a new home she had purchased in North Providence. She was a neighbor of his, he said.

He said he had stopped and left the car for a few moments and when he returned found that either the woman or one of the children had started the motor. The auto was in reverse gear, he said, and backed through the fence.

STRIKE APPEAL TO GOVERNOR

Pawtucket, R. I., July 24—While quiet reigned over the strike area in Pawtucket and Central Falls today, striking textile workers were organizing for a protest march to the State House in Providence next Monday.

The striking textile workers plan to present to Governor Norman S. Case their grievance against the Pawtucket police, whose refusal to permit "peaceful picketing" around the mills of the Royal Weaving Company yesterday flared into a skirmish between police reserves and strikers in which a policeman was injured and three strikers arrested.

More than 1000 marchers are expected to be in the column which will hike the five miles to the State House.

Meanwhile, although no trouble was expected at the mills, closed for Saturday, heavy police guards continued to patrol the strike area.

In the absence of Ann Berlak, "red flame" of the strike, another girl striker, Stella Starwics, 25, was the strikers' inspiration. The Berlak girl was said to be enlisting support for the strike in Boston.

Operation Aids Gloria

Paris, July 25 (AP)—Gloria Swanson, movie actress, was resting quietly today after a minor operation which she underwent at a private clinic yesterday, her doctors said.

GIRL SLAIN IN DESERT

On an expedition into the wilderness of Arizona, near Holbrook, to study the lives and tribal rites of Apache Indians, Miss Henrietta Schmerler, 23-year-old Columbia University co-ed, was mysteriously slain. Her body, stripped of clothing, was found in a ravine by a posse following a week's search. Three Apaches are under arrest. The student had been warned not to leave her cabin at night. (International Newsreel photo.)

PAINTER IS HELD AS SLAYER

Fall River, July 25—Peter Vaillancourt, 42, a painter, arrested on a breaking and entering charge, today was charged with the "mattress murder" of Miss Marianne Gauthier, 46, a housekeeper, found strangled in the home where she was employed on June 16.

Inquiry into the death of Miss Gauthier was reopened last week after authorities expressed dissatisfaction with a tentative verdict of suicide rendered by Medical Examiner Frederick H. Barnes.

Miss Gauthier, employed by William McBride, mill operative, attended early church services on the day of her death, and was last seen when she re-entered the house later in the morning. McBride, returning home in the evening, became alarmed when she failed to answer his calls, and summoned police. Her body, with a rope around the neck, was found between two mattresses on a bed.

Motive for the slaying of Miss Gauthier, police say, was robbery.

BOSTON CLUE IN BABY MYSTERY

Police here today were called to solve the mystery of the parentage of a three-year-old white girl, discovered with an Indian woman near Rockford, Ill., last Thursday.

The often-repeated reference to Boston made by the child yesterday caused police in the Illinois city to believe that this section might hold the secret of the girl's family, and they immediately communicated with police here regarding the strange case.

The Indian woman, Mrs. Martha Thompson, claims the girl is the abandoned daughter of a Mrs. Florence Fuller. She insisted the child's name was Betty Florence Louise Fuller. The child told officials her name was Fond but it was thought this may have been a childish mingling of her different names.

Possible identification of the girl as the kidnapped daughter of Mrs. Katherine Moroney, of Chicago, failed yesterday when Mrs. Moroney saw her and asserted she was not her daughter.

'BOSSY' DECIDES TO PAY JANITOR

Newburyport, July 25—Mayor Andrew J. "Bossy" Gillis today decided not to risk contempt of court proceedings before the Supreme Court.

"Bossy" released the pay of William J. Haggerty, school janitor, thus complying with the Supreme Court order to restore him to duty and pay him $325 back salary for 13 weeks.

Haggerty was appointed janitor of the Jackman school three months ago, but the mayor refused to recognize his appointment, and instructed City Treasurer Charles Houghton not to pay Haggerty his salary.

Haggerty retained Atty. James F. Carens and carried the case to the Supreme Court. The tribunal sustained Haggerty and ordered the mayor to recognize his appointment. When Gillis disregarded the order Carens threatened to file a petition in contempt of court proceedings.

BOY IS SHOT IN HOLDUP; 3 HELD

Taunton, July 25 (AP)—Three youths, one of whom was wounded, were arrested today for a chain store robbery.

Terrence Connors, 24, was arrested when he applied at a Fall River hospital for treatment of a bullet wound in the foot. Edward J. McCarthy, 21, and George McIntyre, 17, both of Fall River, were arrested as they left the store, according to police, who fired several shots to halt them.

McCarthy and McIntyre were held in $1000 each for the grand jury. Police went to Fall River to bring Connors back, and he will be arraigned Monday. Police said the robbery had netted $70 in cash, cigarettes and cakes.

DAILY TRUE STORY
THE DANCE TRAP

NELL LOCKED HER ARMS AROUND HIM

SHOOTING PAINS started at Nell Murray's toes. Whether they stopped at her ankles or knees, or whether that dull aching in her head was just an echo of the torture pedally started was something that she wondered about, sub-consciously.

But her fixed smile never stopped a minute. The dimples in her cheeks always showed. There was no hint in her dervish dancing that she'd give her life just to sit down.

Nell's act at the super-gay "White Kitten" was a pep number. She wore ankle socks above her patent leather pumps with only rice powder from top of her socks to the bottom of the black velvet shorts, sequin spangled, that tossed back myriad rays of light when the spot light followed her about the floor.

Night after night the tipsy crowd around the tables applauded noisily each time she took the floor. Eager hands reached out sometimes to grab her, when her gyrations carried her too near the edge of the dancing space. This night of all nights there had been two maudlin, would-be Lotharios who seemed to have some sort of drag with the boss. They'd actually followed her, after one number, to the corridor that led to the dressing rooms. Only when she went direct to Moreno and threatened to quit, contract or no contract, had he told them they must "let the little girl alone."

Girl of Beauty Had Drawing Power

Moreno knew the drawing power of the girl beauty with her dance range from the wild Arab "stokira" to the sinuous weavings of her Burma Temple glide.

"Feelin' bad, baby?" he queried, after he'd sent the two back to their table space. Moreno put all the tenderness he knew of in that seemingly casual inquiry.

"I feel lower than the skid chains on a snake"—she rubbed her aching feet a moment and then let her hands pass up to her throbbing head. She pulled more closely about her the cape brought to her by her maid.

"Maybe you better skip the next show," he told her, and Nell knew he was making the supreme gesture when he said that.

"I'll be all right if I lie down until my next number—but I'd sure like to have a chance to keep from working the tables between shows"—it was one of the strong drawing points at the "White Kitchen" that the dancers sat with the patrons when not actually on the floor.

Calls Up Mother And Asks About Baby

Patiently, back in the dressing room, she lay on a couch until a chorus number took most of the other girls out of the place. Then, casually, she took the telephone from its hood and called a number in a voice so low it could not have been heard six feet away. It seemed casually too that she heard a tattoo on the mouthpiece of the instrument with a pencil when she'd heard a voice answer on the wire.

Clarinet and throbbing rhythm from a tom-tom were her music when she came back on the floor. She glided on rather than by other movement and her henna-powered body took up the snaky motion of an Oriental dance.

A slim, dark-eyed man sat at a corner table, but slightly removed from the two who had bothered her before. From where he sat he could see every person in the place. His elbows rested on the table, the forearms letting his hands drop below the table edge and toward his belt.

She even forced her own eyes to seek those of the lone stranger, and then dance as Salome might have danced.

Nell Murray danced as one inspired—danced solely, openly and brazenly to the man in gray.

Soft-footed as a cat steps door opened and the man in gray stepped in.

"Marvellous," was his only word.

She stood panting by the make-up table, drew her cape about her and stepped to a private dressing box. His feet blocked her as she would shut the door, and she didn't protest when he came on inside.

"We are alone, absolutely?—it was a statement and a question all in one. She nodded and he calmly locked the door.

"Come here," he commanded—and she came.

He listened, tensely for a moment, and then gave full attention to the girl. His hand sought the creamy whiteness of her shoulder— and slid down to the elbow and then on to her wrist.

"Velvet," he stated.

Suddenly he pulled her to him, crushed her lips to his with fierceness. She yielded to his caress— even gave back some measure of his passion. Then as his arms relaxed she threw herself again to his embrace. Suddenly she stepped back, holding her hip.

"You hurt me," she declared, and the man in gray sheepishly took an automatic from its holster, laid it behind him, and again came toward the girl.

When her arms were again about him they suddenly locked. She gave a single cry. Too late he tried to get from her clutches. He found himself looking into two other guns.

Two other men brought in Moreno, through the sash hidden door that was the secret of the room. The four of them flashed the small triangular shields of the Secret Service.

"You see, Moreno," said one of the agents, "your partner, Farvello there shot the man the lady loves. Luckily for him he's getting better, but we knew it would be hard to take Farvello alive. Nell used to be a dancer, before she married Jack Murray two years ago. He was on the job to trap Farvello, and trace down his counterfeiting gang.

"Tonight Nell tapped her message out in Morse code on the telephone. Then she played up heavy to Farvello—well, a guy with a racket should leave the girls alone."

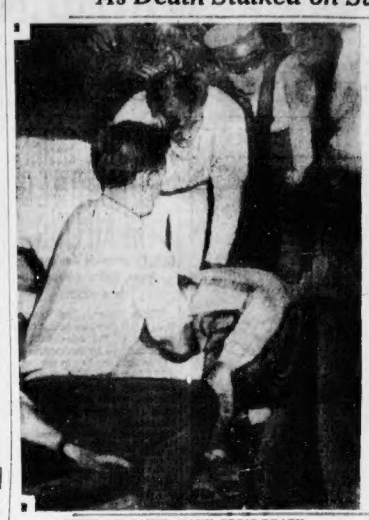
As Death Stalked on Swift Wings of Flame in Pittsburgh Home for Aged



FIRST AID SAVED MANY FROM DEATH

Death for nearly two score stalked on the wings of flame through the Home for Aged of the Little Sisters of the Poor in Pittsburgh late last night. Firemen and Sisters risked their lives in heroic efforts to save the 250 patients. The flames trapped many of the aged inmates in their rooms before rescuers could reach them. Others were injured in leaps from windows high above the ground. Medical aid rushed to the scene from all Pittsburgh hospitals gave first aid at the scene.

INJURED IN PITTSBURGH FIRE

FAITH COSTS LIVES OF SOME OF 30 FIRE VICTIMS

When the flames had been checked, firemen, prodding through the broken, twisted embers, found those who had been trapped, whose rescue had been cut off or who had, of their own will, delayed rescue too long.

SOME DIED IN SLEEP

Here and there a body was found beneath a bed. Others lay where they had gone to sleep only a few hours before the terrible cry of "fire!" rang through the halls.

At the foot of a stairway, just before dawn, firemen came upon a group of dead who apparently had been overcome while trying to reach safety.

The silence of the tense crowd as the charred bodies were brought from the flames, one by one, and laid upon the lawns, was broken at intervals by cheers as another was carried alive from the inferno.

At daybreak, white-haired, a Capuchin monk, Father Paul, chaplain of the institution, stood with bowed head before the charred building. Tears streamed down his cheeks as he raised his eyes to the blackened cross atop the main building and murmured a prayer for the dead and dying.

HEROES EVERY ONE.

Nuns, priests, volunteers from the streets, firemen, policemen and inmates—heroes all—were found on every side today as accounts of the disaster were recounted.

The Catholic sisters, in charge of the charity institution inhabited by the aged and homeless, remained at their posts in the fire-swamped structure, aiding their charges to escape. Priests braved fire and smoke to administer last rites to the dying, and men and boys—from poolrooms, residences and corner gatherings—risked their lives along with firemen and police.

William Gaefke, who lives two houses away, saw an old man frantically waving his arms from a third-story window and shouting "fire." Gaefke turned in the first alarm and then turned to work of rescue. He aided 15 inmates to the lawn.

John Hoffman, a city employe, one of the first on the scene, told of battling with several old men who resisted his efforts to lead them to safety.

The men declared the home was under divine guidance and could not burn. Hoffman rebuked, and one aged inmate shoved him to the ground from a ladder.

Thomas Martin, 18, and another youth, whose name was not learned, rescued 21 persons. Martin also broke into the chapel and carried the chalice to the outside, where he handed it to a priest.

Bert Huber, 21, collapsed while climbing a ladder to continue rescue work and was taken to a hospital suffering from smoke and exhaustion. He helped rescue 10.

Ed Grock, another volunteer, retrieved a body and brought out four persons alive, and an unidentified boy of 17 or so ran to and from the building seven times to save seven inmates and then collapsed.

PRAYER AVERTS PANIC

Still gripped by horror, heroes in the fire, told of aged men and women who faced death without fear—with a prayer on their lips and their last gesture the Sign of the Cross.

One of the first men to dash inside the burning home was Frank B. Michaels.

"There was no panic," he said. "I carried four people out—one of them was dead when we got out. They were fearless. I saw many on their knees, their lips moving in prayer.

"One little gray-haired woman cried for help from an upper window. We saw her cross herself and close the window. We shoved a ladder up against the window but we never saw her again."

Frank Ward, another rescue worker, said:

"There were dead lying on every side of the third floor. I saw four dead men, burned to a crisp, in one corner. It looked as though they had huddled together for companionship."

SAVE HOLY IMAGES

Sister Agatha, the mother superior in charge and one of the foremost in rescue efforts, led the firemen and volunteers, unlocking the main doors and the doors of the rooms on the inside, the institution having been locked up at the usual time, 8 o'clock.

Eight aged women, occupants of a room on an upper floor of the home, made efforts to save each other as the fire spread terror.

Statues of the Mother and the Child and other holy images were carried from the flaming building by many of the fleeing inmates.

Of the inmates themselves, the stronger helped the weaker; those who could struggled from window to window, crying for rescue; those whose infirmities pinned them to the rooms, followed the example of blind Mrs. Mary Kline, 80, who "dropped on my knees and prayed to God," and many of them were saved.

Outside, firemen, battered down the heavy gates to get in their equipment, fought futilely for a time to maintain ladders that burned as they were reared, and then turned to life nets, frantically calling to the imprisoned to leap for their lives.

Even before firemen reached the scene scores of the men of the poor, down-at-the-heel neighborhood in which the home stood had scaled the walls and begun the work of rescue. Before fierce heat drove them back they raced into the burning struct re, bearing out the helpless.

When heat frustrated them they formed human chains on fire escapes, passing old men and women one to the other until the ground was reached.

On the wide lawn below physicians and nurses plied their tasks. Nearly all those brought out required treatment of some nature. A few were administered oxygen in the shadow of the inferno that had been the home of their dying days.

Within and without priests gave the last sacrament to the dying at the risk of their lives.

STARTED IN BASEMENT

Yet the terror of the sudden alarm, their helplessness and the doubts as to whether they could or would be saved were not the first concern of many of those borne to safety.

Of those who were given first aid on the lawn of the home many had clasped in their arms the holy emblems of their faith.

The fire, it was established hours after, started in the basement of the four-story brick charitable institution at Penn and South Aiken aves. in the East End section.

On every floor nuns remained at their posts, trying to rescue where they could, refusing to be rescued and insisting that their charges be taken first when help was at hand.

Of the 250 persons confined to the home, not one was under 60 years old, and most of them were much older. So many were infirm that firemen admitted that had not volunteers swarmed to the scene the situation could not have been controlled as quickly as it was.

Three hospitals were crowded to their capacity within an hour, and homes, schools, and parish houses in the neighborhood were thrown open to receive the hurt and homeless. An emergency hospital was set up in a school across the street.

A "conservative" fire department estimate placed the damage at $150,000.

WHEN NEAR DEATH RODE WITH FIREMEN

Three firemen, including Lieut. Edward F. Doyle, who yesterday was promoted to the rank of captain, narrowly escaped death early today when a truck crashed into Engine 22 at Dartmouth and Boylston sts., while it was responding to an alarm. The truck was driven by John N. Stearns of Springfield, shown in the inset. The three injured firemen were taken to the City Hospital. (Staff photos.)

Washington, July 25 (AP)—Drastic economy in government expenditures in the current and forthcoming fiscal year has been demanded by President Hoover to meet sharply declining treasury receipts.

TRIAL OF DEAD VS. OBITS IN THE PRESS

By Gilbert Seldes

I HAVE JUST DISCOVERED how the ancient Egyptians managed to get along without the long obituary notices which are such a strange part of the newspapers of today. They got along without sporting pages because they saw the sports and took part in them, instead of reading about them; and they may have had comic strips—Krazy Kat is certainly a descendant of the cat of the Bubastes. But the "obit" did not exist.

* * *

Who Reads Them?

Mr. Robert Benchley, or perhaps it was Guy Fawkes, was asking the other day who read obituary notices of famous people, who read the telegrams of praise and regret which the death of any well-known man brings forth—and why. This shows a limited imagination; people are always interested in finding out that the great are also mortal and must die; and read with passionate interest the story of how they rose to fame or notoriety; and refresh their memories with hints of old scandal or with tales of valor; and all of us probably envy the Arnold Bennett hero who lived to read his own obituary and the sweet regrets of his relatives.

Yet the obituary notice is unsatisfactory because it is written under the shadow of a living man, with his feelings and his relatives always in mind. The biographer who comes later seldom echoes the undisturbed praise of the death notice. A famous man died and his past is skimmed for his good points on the basis of "nothing but good of the dead," which originally meant, I feel sure, that it was hardly worth while speaking ill of those whom death had taken.

* * *

Judgment by the Styx

The Egyptians felt differently. For our trial by newspaper, they had an actual Trial of the Dead; for our soft praise they had a prosecutor and an attorney for the defense. In "The Martyrdom of Man," which I have already recommended to the best of my ability, Winwood Reade gives a description of the scene: The hearse followed by the mourning family comes to the bank of a lake; on the opposite shores is the sacred burial ground; off shore Charon stands in his skiff, waiting for the corpse. But before the burial can proceed, the trial must be held. On the banks of the lake sit forty-two judges, in a crescent.

"It was in the power of any man to step forward and accuse the departed before the body could be borne across. If the charge was held to be proved, the body was denied burial in the consecrated ground, and the crowd silently dispersed."

But if the accusations fell, the relatives began to sing the obituary notice, the full biography, the crowd joined in and the burial was accomplished.

* * *

The Long Home

The Egyptian did not think of death as modern, faithful or infidel. To him the body was not neither limbo nor the temporary resting place between death and resurrection; it was an eternal home. That is why the walls were covered with pictures of all the priceless possessions of a man had had in life, with scenes from his past, and precious jewels and food and wine were left in the mausoleum. Not every man knew that before he could enter his long home he would have to go through the ordeal of the trial. It was, as Reade says, a powerful engine for morality, it gave tangible force to public opinion, and it touched those sins which the law could not punish.

And, for a final item, if any man brought an accusation against the dead, and the verdict of the judges was that the dead man was innocent, the accuser had to suffer the penalty of the crime alleged. It must have been a wholesome check against malice and spite; it was the "verdict with costs" for the defendant.

A Bitter Letter

The writer of the following letter signed her name and then tore most of the signature away. I don't know anything about the subject. I am innocent even of casting reproaches on those who talk about operations, for all I said was that those who never had them, never speak of them.

"Last night you hit me squarely between the eyes and I'm afraid I didn't like it. The morning, however, I've caught my breath, and I'd like to say a word or two—like:

"I've had an operation, I talk about it, and I intend to keep right on talking to my last day. I am not only the biggest sucker on earth, but I am a living example of what the medical professional will do for you if you will just give them a chance.

"An operation for cancer—a cancer which NEVER existed. An operation which left me with a paralyzed arm and side for six weeks—a useless arm for three years—a crooked, hideous body for LIFE, SIX long years of pain, pain—remorse—'I for nothing—all because of a too hurried diagnosis—all because the world is flooded with doctors who care not a whoop for relieving suffering humanity, but who regard their profession in terms of commercialism only—all because the majority of young interns in laboratories haven't even the common sense to distinguish between a swollen gland and a malignant cancerous growth—and the public suffers, physically and financially.»

If the world heard only of the mistakes in diagnosis, what would become of the art of surgery? And do young internes make the final decision? I had heard different.

To My Creditors

Dear Butcher and Baker and Mover,
Dear Tinker and Tailor and Maid:
Consider the method I recover
Re debts that are due but unpaid.
In candor I make a confession:
I'm virtually bankrupt, I fear.
Oh, help me to end my depression!
Oh, cancel my debts for a year!

A system that all social layers
Endorse as reserving a break
Should certainly go with purveyors
Of strudel and porterhouse steak.
The doldrums of dark desolation
You'll lift from my soul when I hear
You say with the Head of The Nation:
"Your debts are deferred for a year!"

Books

By The Reader

IF ONLY THOSE who should write knew how to write, reading would be a more agreeable pastime than it is. Most of us know men of original viewpoint and simple lives—up-country guides or husbandmen along the "crick" road whose chronicles would have immense charm.

The terrible thought comes to us that if they took pen in hand they would begin to posture like everyone else, and the natural virtue would go out of them.

A. L. McCorrison, a New Hampshire farmer unknown to fame, has managed to escape this fate. Hence the quality in "Letters from Fraternity," which he wrote to Ben Ames Williams and which Dutton's have just put out.

One of the dwindling race of Yankee Spartans was McCorrison. He dwelt for 50 years on Hardscrabble Farm. From 1918 to 1930 he wrote these pieces to Williams, scratching them off on the kitchen table, with the dog asleep under it and the fire banked for the night.

* * *

He was a tough-minded man, with a shrewd humor and a Virgilian simplicity. In these epistles, devoid of artifice—except in one or two spots—he surveys his life; the past life when he had 19 neighbors, and the present, with just five, and no Mrs. McCorrison any more.

A healthy perception of values is to be seen in him. It is only the important things that interest this farmer. How many ducks there will be in the meadow this fall; the way people danced back in 1882; the excellence of all the priceless possessions of a man had had in life, with scenes from his past, and precious jewels and food and wine were left in the mausoleum. Not every man knew that before he could enter his long home he would have to go through the ordeal of the trial. It was, as Reade says, a powerful engine for morality, it gave tangible force to public opinion, and it touched those sins which the law could not punish.

And, for a final item, if any man brought an accusation against the dead, and the verdict of the judges was that the dead man was innocent, the accuser had to suffer the penalty of the crime alleged. It must have been a wholesome check against malice and spite; it was the "verdict with costs" for the defendant.

Women's Clothes

By Agnes Smith

JUST AS EVERY WOMAN begins longing for Spring clothes toward the end of February, so now when July is dragging itself to a close does the feminine heart hanker for furs, velvets and tweeds.

Women are unseasonable creatures. They always want the untimely, the unexpected, the exotic. I never yet knew a woman who didn't crave a velvet hat in August. A velvet hat on a blistering, weary August day brings poise and coolness to the soul; it marks you as an up-and-coming person, as a woman with a bright, hopeful eye to the future.

Being thoroughly tired of Summer and hot weather, a woman may dismiss the season simply by putting on a velvet hat—new Fall model—and so convince herself that Autumn is virtually here.

* * *

The Fur Sales

Men cannot understand the annual August agitation over fur coats. Why should fur sales invariably be set for August, when it isn't logical to think of coats at all?

The answer is that, to a woman, the idea of a fur coat in August is a delectable and beautiful thought. It is the feminine way of gathering in the harvest for the Winter. When a woman buys a fur coat with the thermometer at 90 degrees, she thinks: "Now bring on your Winter winds and your football games! I am ready for all sorts of weather and a long hard Winter."

At the end of the Summer a woman wants plenty of luxury and no more simplicity. The perfectly lovely bathing suit is getting faded and worn. In June, it was new and different; now one sees the same model everywhere. The gay chiffon evening gowns look bedraggled about the hem and the shoulder straps need mending. After so many months of innocently flowered frocks one longs for the worldliness of dark velvet.

* * *

As for sports clothes, perhaps one isn't, after all, the sports type. One has a revulsion against looking fresh, crisp and wholesome, day in and day out. The sun-tan that goes with the sports dress has lost its novelty. It is beginning to look like nothing but a neglected complexion. Something must be done about it, since by the early forecasts the new Fall colors will demand a milk white skin.

Of course, last Winter's clothes really did not work out so well. But last Winter was different; the fashions were rather dowdy. In retrospect one can see their deficiencies; all those clothes in the closet must be thrown out.

* * *

Those New Clothes

But this Winter is going to be another story. There won't be any more depression. You owe it to yourself and a suffering world to buy some grand looking clothes; to give more time to studying your type.

You will, as soon as you return to town, go in for a course of facials. You will let your hair grow—or cut it off again, as the case may be. Anything for progress and improvement!

And your brain, too, will not be neglected. You will go more often to the opera and Philharmonic. Musically speaking, you are out of training. You will see all the worthwhile plays and read all the good books. You have let down terribly during the Summer, and aren't you ashamed of yourself?

There is so much you want toward the end of a Summer, if you are a woman. The sight of a new Fall gown in the newspapers is as welcome as the first picture of Santa Claus to a child.

* * *

Yearning for Fall

You want furs and heavy dresses and dark draperies. You think of open fireplaces and football games and turkey dinners. You look forward to going to the opera on a cold, snowy night instead of listening to the radio on the verandah.

You are tired of eating dinner by half daylight, and you are bored with the Summer decorations in the restaurants.

All the friends to whom you so willingly said good-by in May now seem perfectly fascinating and delightful persons. You wish that they would come back from wherever they have been. Your Summer friendships are fading a bit.

You would, above all things, gladly abolish the whole month of August and jump immediately into the heart of September.

Solution—

Contract, backgammon,
Games of chance and skill,
Anagrams of all puzzles
Only break my will!
Poker and Michigan,
And rummy and old-maid,
Render me insensible
And more than half afraid.

Ping-pong and tennis,
And even—yes, croquet—
Make my legs quite tired,
And steal my breath away.
There are shows that must be seen,
And books that should be read—
Gosh, I guess I'll draw the shades
And—stay—in—bed!

'U. S. TO PAY IN EUROPE CRISIS,' SAYS CONRY

America has dictated the economic conferences abroad because eventually America will be expected to pay all the bills, said Traffic Commissioner Joseph A. Conry of Boston, speaking last night at the firemen's carnival at Georgetown.

"Europe's trouble may be attributed to the fact that amateurs are trying to conduct affairs," he said.

He praised Mayor Curley as one who has the ability to see conditions in their true light and as a leader who has shown a way to relieve the stress of business depression.

U. S. TO PAY BILL

"The attention of the world is centered on the conference just ended in London, attended by delegates from the seven principal countries of the world, assembled for the purpose of saving the German Republic from bankruptcy," said Comr. Conry.

"The American government has taken a directing part in the affairs of the conference. Indeed, we may as well confess that America has dictated the business of the conference, and eventually America will be expected to pay all the bills.

"In olden times it was the favored policy of kings, troubled with conditions at home, to secretly arouse external affairs, threatening a foreign war. The purpose being to distract the attention of the people from affairs at home by appealing to them to beware of the danger of outside attack.

* * *

"Some, in America are asking the question, haven't we trouble enough of our own in this country, business depression, unemployment and worse than all, lack of leadership to remove the cause of our troubles? Then, why plunge into the vortex of European depression, unemployment and lack of leadership?

"Europe's trouble may be attributed to the fact that amateurs are trying to conduct affairs.

PRAISE FOR CURLEY

"We have some leaders in this country, some in our own State, of far superior ability to the men who are muddling our foreign affairs. Honorable A. Piatt Andrew, the Congressman from your district, whose splendid intellectual ability and recognized capacity for hard work, are admired even by those, who like myself, are not members of his political party.

"Columns of space are used to explain differences of opinion between our own representative and Mayor Curley of Boston recently returned from a study in Europe. His knowledge of governmental affairs enabled him to see conditions in their true light. Restore business prosperity to our own country first. Spend a billion dollars on public works putting money into circulation.

"Are you firemen at this time, know that when you wanted to start on an old dried up pump, you threw a couple of buckets of water down the pump and then started to vigorously work the handle. Let us do the same thing in our government matters.

OPPOSED TO DOLE

"Mayor Curley knows from practical experience that when men are idle they must be supported. There is only one alternative. Men must either have work or they must have the dole. He is opposed to the dole. He is strongly in favor of appropriating large sums of public money to preserve the self respect of our working people, as well as to provide them with means of living. Those who don't understand government can't discuss this question intelligently. Mayor Curley does understand government and speaks as an authority.

"Mayor Curley became the traffic commissioner for the people of the world; for light, signals, information, and not the power to quell the threatened conflagration. America's aid is always sought."

Mr. Conry then presented to the firemen's carnival a design of a new traffic signal post which will do the work formerly done by five different poles. The new form of post provides for an electric street light, a street sign, traffic signal system, traffic warning and a fire alarm box.

Peg Gives Up A Handcuff

—By Arthur "Bugs Baer—

When Peggy Hopkins gives up a bracelet, it's news.

When she gives it to the government, it's more than news.

———

Seems that Peggy squared a federal rap by tossing off a twelve thousand dollar wrist warmer to the Revenue Department.

———

This is the same bracelet Peg forgot to declare at Customs. She said she didn't know she had it. She's right. She ain't got it now.

———

Which one of the government officials is entitled to wear it? Andy Mellon is head man but we don't think Andy would like to point at his wrist and simper, "I got it from Peggy."

———

There is no chance of it disappearing now that the Democrats know the Republicans have it.

———

It's one of those things that will be passed along with each administration. And Peggy won't miss the diamond quoit much. She's got so many left she can't bend her elbow.

Broadcasting Chiefs Make New Plans

Fussy About Titles on the Air

With prosperity comes independence; which is no old timproverb. In fact, 'twas never thus until well along in the current twentieth century, unlimited. Confessing it or no big broadcasters appear to considering devious ways and means for cutting down excessive blah-blah on the air.

In other words, NBC and CBS would both very much like to retrade names soft pedaled from sponsored programs. It certainly seems very much that way.

Secret sources of information known to moderns as the grapevine channel, bring rumors that the time has come for more theater connection with titles and announcements—less ballyhooey. For a more definite explanation of these terms, read on.

* * *

PREFER CATCHY TITLES

So thoroughly has the idea been considered, not at all surprising would be word that sponsors are called together for a discussion, if not an ultimatum, on the subject. Radio bosses no longer fancy a program called "The Swanee Musicians." A listing like "The Jolly Undertakers," they claim, would undoubtedly "make a bigger hit." Maybe so. In any event here is likely development involving one magnificent battle of wits.

* * *

One of the better known New York columnists yesterday jumped into radio's realm for a tid-bit. Such practice is getting to be a habit with those chappies. Inconvenience appears based on radio's failure to air the voice of Germany's former Kaiser. As we pointed out that William Feiring head man of CBS, has been visiting Wilhelm at Doorn. No use thing! Furthermore, Uncle Bob looks with more or less disdain on any plan of the kind. Just so his interests are not molested. see?

* * *

RADIO IN RETROSPECT

In order to manipulate transmitters from a plane, Al Duffy's friend Colonel Lindbergh, the ace operator's test and passed it with 96, an unusually high mark . . . Lindy's wife also got a high sign with 94 . . . Trying to be different from all other ork leaders, Ted Lyles made it noticeable Wednesday night (WNAC) at 7:30 . . . In personation night he made it B. A. Rolfe continues his fast tempo, the only possible vocalist imaginable is Mona Lisa, who cannot, or will not sing . . . American programs seldom travel through Europe waves in bigger hits spite old world bits aired on these shores . . . Which, no kidding, our mooseeck ovadare? . . . John (WBZ) Clark has one of those unflattering hydraulic jobs . . . Linus (WNAC Travers did not take the much discussed white suit to Niagara Falls (where he will arrive) unless a local cleanser is wrong . . . Morris Gest's big theater will first be produced on the air waves by a young announcer at WGN Chicago . . . He remembers it and says Amos was the fellow . . . Andy's p says, 'that's right' . . . Lou (WEEI) Whitman has a positive corking definition of temperament not suitable to print . . . Don't forget Dorchester's Old Home Week" (WNAC) tonight at 7:15.

BOUND TO BE MISSED

Two weeks away from it all begins for Gene and Glenn on Monday. Perhaps they'll do better known as Jake and Lena heard through WEEI. Two Arkan sas farmers, "Lum and Abner," will be the Early Birds while G. & E. rest up a bit.

As a closing comment on today's first paragraph, when a high falutin concern wanted to promote a radio team called the "Biscuit Shooters" they were urged to call their skit "Wise Crackers," or "Sweet Cookies." N. F. T.

WHOOPEE! HURRAH AND HALLELUJAH! WE ARE going away—of course to come back—but we are off on a little vagabonding with a man of the world. After all these months, he is appearing on the scene and just in time because we are so eager to be off we could not wait to cross another t or dot another i, in case we always do those things.

* * *

So this is a little scrap-book for you to keep until we meet again. Things I like to look back upon—Mr. Allison V. Armour, a handsome New Yorker, looking very romantic at a popular social event this week—Mrs. Samuel Warren, always noticeable with her lovely daughters, and also without them, in blue evening gown at the same event—Mrs. Alvan T. Fuller making one of her prima donna entrances at a smart theater in a heavenly shaded pastel chiffon gown—our ex-governor's wife is one of the most beautifully and tastefully gowned matrons in Boston society—Mrs. Robert Livermore simply dressed, as always, which accentuates a pretty figure—Mrs. Archer Friend, music and art lover, so interesting we forgot to note her costume—one of our important debutantes of this season, Madelyn Phillips, attending a premiere with young Benjamin Beale, father and mother, John C. Phillips in the background, Mrs. Phillips quite regal in black lace—we can remember suggesting once that lace became her delicate beauty—she evidently chooses it, too.

Mrs. William Potter Entertains at Tea

AFTER SUCH A SEASON OF YOUTHFUL ENGAGEMENTS, it is quite romantic to read of Peggy Bent's engagement to a chap 16 years her senior. We approve.

* * *

Mrs. William Potter, who was Alvira Boardman, is giving a tea this afternoon for Mrs. Henry Abbot, who is visiting her daughter, Mrs. Reggie Foster, at Marblehead Neck.

THEY ARE SAYING THAT the older generation are a bit disappointed that the Thursday night dinner dances have been given up at the Eastern Yacht Club and Saturday night supper dances substituted. Oh, dear, why can't they arrange these things so that the young-old may still enjoy the gambols of the old-young? It would seem that the younger generation could delight in having their parents and aunts and grandmothers at their parties as we did in the good old days—but maybe it is the grandmothers, aunts and mothers' own fault they haven't got up to the Union, or something. Whatever the cause, we think the young could endure a little adult life without too much effort and maybe learn something.

MISS HELEN COOLIDGE—who has the distinction of being a friend of our leading newspaper correspondent—and daughter of Sidney Coolidge of Concord, is sailing for abroad soon after the Harvard summer school term is over. She is studying French and biology, we think it is biology she said, and is planning a trip to Europe to brush up in the former and study the latter. She attended Bryn Mawr last year and is planning to enter Radcliffe later.

* * *

THE COOLIDGES ARE AN ambitious family—an older sister, Mary Louise, has been teaching philosophy at Vassar and is going into Wellesley this fall as dean. Philip, one of the sons of the family, is a radio spotlight broadcasting from Worcester.

* * *

THE SUMMER SEASON IS nearing the peak at Bar Harbor and one of the outstanding social events will be the wedding of Elizabeth Atwater Kent and young Van Alen of Newport.

* * *

THE WEEK OF AUGUST 3 will be tennis week, when the Dana and Searborough, British destroyers, will be in port. It certainly does jazz things up a bit when the fleet comes into any port, and we can recommend English naval officers.

* * *

A PRIVATE DANCE WAS given at the Camden Yacht Club by Commodore Cyrus H. K. Curtis and the members of the club for the Boston yachts which disbanded there. It was a great party in a great big way.

Hats and Scarfs Add Accent

By ANN ARDEN

THE RIGHT hat for the sports outfit, be it in the active or passive mood, becomes a most important consideration. Once we had the cloche and that was that with no other possibilities.

* * *

NOW THERE are so many styles from which to choose that it is not always easy to make the proper selection.

* * *

CLOCHES ARE still good, a little wider as to brim, but blocked in tailored fashion and drooping over the face all the way around. These in Panama are always right and seem to go with almost everything.

* * *

FOR MANY weeks to come you will be using the Panama hat for coolness and protection from the sun.

* * *

* * *

WITH ALL the summer hurrah anent the scarf, we welcome any new way to adjust the tieing thereof. This is an idea for a perfectly plain sports frock—one handkerchief tied loosely across the shoulders and another one of exactly the same sort tied about the waist in lieu of a belt. What other trimming is needed? And you can be as gay as you like with the colors.

* * *

BOUCLET HAS blossomed this season in many weaves and textures. There are the heavierpoons and those that are so light that they are put in the featherweight class.

Mackays Will Go Abroad

By CHOLLY KNICKERBOCKER

New York, July 25 (US)—How many, I wonder, realize that "Clarcy" Mackay, whose recent wedding to the charming and talented Anne Case called forth much polite comment in the social ranks, is the godfather of Muriel Vanderbilt Church, who has a date to meet Henry D. Phelps at the nuptial altar some time in September?

In the olden days there was much social intercourse between the Vanderbilts and the Mackays and inasmuch as Mrs. Graham Fair Vanderbilt's father, the late "Jim" Fair, had been a partner in various mining projects of "Clarcy's" father, the late John W. Mackay, there was no surprise when "Clarcy" was asked to serve as godfather to the older Vanderbilt daughter.

Today the Vanderbilt children and the Mackay children see but little of each other. Which proves that even the '49 families have drifted apart.

En passant, "Clarcy" and our bride are sailing for Europe a week from Monday where they will honeymoon for several months, and it is a foregoing conclusion they will go to Scotland where they will be joined by Mr. Mackay's only son and daughter-in-law, the John W. Mackays, who crossed the big pond early this week.

For a time, Southampton intrigued the wealthy head of the Mackay cable system, but following the marriages of his elder daughter, Katherine, he lost interest in the Long Island spa and turned his attention to Scotland.

Rev. Dr. Brougher Reported Better

Dr. James Whitcomb Brougher, pastor of Tremont Temple, who was stricken with influenza in Los Angeles early in the week, was reported greatly improved in a dispatch received at Tremont Temple. His condition was so much better that his physician said he thought seriously of letting him preach Sunday and would permit him to do so unless there was a relapse.

Ten Children Will Get Bangor Estate

Bangor, Me., July 25—A petition authorizing Edward M. G. Graham, president of the Bangor Hydro Electric Company, to distribute the estate of his father, John R. Graham, former president of the Bangor Railway and Electric Company, has been allowed here. A total of $628,749 will be distributed among 10 children. Each will get $63,847, less individual indebtedness.

New Names on List of Debs

All sorts of additions and subtractions have been made to the debutante list for the coming season. We have already given out one list of dates for their affairs, and now we want to fill in the gaps as far as possible.

In the first place, the many names have been added to the original list without any dates, but just the fact that they will appear on the threshold when their hour falls due.

They include the Misses Ruth P. Chase, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Philip P. Chase of Milton; Eleonore Colleredo-Mansfield, who will be with Mr. and Mrs. I. Tucker Burr for the winter, and who is the daughter of the Countess Colleredo-Mansfield, and sister of the boy who was such a popular man at Harvard varsity crew last year; Elizabeth M. and Louise J. Goodhue, who will be with Miss Jane B. Patten of South Natick; Constance B. Howe, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George E. Howe of Brookline.

Other new names on the list are Huldah Lang, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Howard Lang, of 49 Mt. Vernon st.; Mollie Page, daughter of Mrs. Arthur W. Page of County Line Farm, Huntington, L. I.; Polly Paine, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John A. Paine of West Newton; Charlotte M. Rantoul, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Augustus Rantoul of Salem; Ellen Balch Stone, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert B. Stone of Jamaica Plain; Mary B. Titus, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond S. Titus of Jamaica Plain, and Verna E. Van Denberg, who will be with Mr. William Marriott Welch of Egypt for the winter.

Then there is a long list of undecided ones who, when they do make up their minds, will find it hard to investigate a date from Miss Mary Porter, the debbies' hourhand, which will not clash with someone else's.

Society of the Deaf Elects Chicago Man

Arthur L. Roberts of Chicago was elected president of the National Fraternal Society of the Deaf at the final business session of the silent convention, held for the past five days at the Statler Hotel. At the same time it was announced Kansas City had been selected for the site of the next convention, to be held in 1933.

Man About Town

—By AL DUFFY—

ADVICE TO LOVELORN

People write funny letters to columnists . . . Take Mary Jane, for instance . . . Mary apparently thinks that this column is a blood brother to the one run by Beatrice Fairfax—by the good Lord only knows! . . . At any rate, Mary Jane has turned to us for advice and we'd be less than gallant if we ignored her letter, so here goes.

"Dear Man About Town:

I want to get a man's reaction to my problem—a newspaperman's reaction—if perhaps you can help me out. Maybe you can look on the other side of it and tell me what you see there.

I am from Georgia. I am 19 years old. In the past—that is, when I was a small girl—my family was quite wealthy. But unwise investments have dissipated our fortune and, about a year ago, I came North to earn my living. Business is so pokey in the South! I was quite fortunate. I found a good job here in Boston and I have been earning an unusually good salary for an inexperienced girl.

"A few months after I came to Boston I met a boy and we fell in love. He is a newspaperman, a reporter on a Boston paper. Al, he's a wonderful boy and since we have known each other we have been very happy. When we first met I saw him every single day, but for the past few months it's been different, somehow. You see, he's been sent out of town to cover several big stories lately. First it was one murder and then a second murder and, after that, the trial. Then, right in the middle of the trial he was transferred over to cover that perfectly awful Starr Faithful case in New York. While he was away he wired to me or telephoned every day.

"But Al, it has been terribly lonesome without him. If we get married what assurance have I that it won't continue this way? I mean, how can I be sure that he won't be sent off on stories all the time? Al, I'm miserable. Can't you tell me what I should do?

"MARY JANE."

First of all, Mary Jane, please understand that we're no good at this kind of stuff. Columnists' hearts are always posers and who are we to attempt to advise you? But we do sympathize and for that reason we're going to tell you how your problem looks to us.

You want to know how you can be sure that your reporter-boy friend won't be running off on stories all the time after you're married. That's just the hell of it, Mary Jane, you can't be sure. As a matter of fact you can be pretty sure that he WILL be called on to do just that.

This newspaper game is a funny racket, Mary Jane. It plays hob with any home life you may want to have, as the outsider sees it and always felt that there should be a law forbidding newspapermen and theatrical people to marry. For you see, Mary Jane, a newspaperman is always working. He can never tell when a story will break and he'll be sent gallivanting to some distant spot to get the news.

And when his editor does assign him to one of these stories the reporter can't say, "I'm sorry, but the movies and I had planned to go to dinner tonight."

If you do marry your reporter, Mary Jane, you'll have to be satisfied with second place. For a married reporter is a bigamist of sorts. He's wedded, first of all, to his job —and a darn exacting job it is, too. Then, he's married to his wife. And it's no fun trying to reconcile the two of 'em, believe me.

So there you are, Mary Jane. Take it for whatever it's worth. From what you tell me about your boy I'd say that he liked you pretty well. When he'll take time out on a big story to phone to you and to send you a wire, you can bet pretty sure that he's still thinking of you. The matter now seems to be to find it the job at hand. Good luck to you both, Mary Jane.

Phew!! That was a tough job.

CHURCH NEWS

POPE SUGGESTS SOLUTION FOR MODERN EVIL

A central recommendation of Pope Pius sent out this week by the National Catholic Welfare Conference, dwells upon the fact that the Pope recommended an economic reorganization which would put great power into the hands of various industries and trades, made up somewhat after the manner of the medieval guilds. The Pope speaks of such a plan as the "spontaneous and natural development" as "not essential to civil society."

In its logical development, it is held by many, that it would be the cure of the class conflict and an end of plutocratic domination, the way to avoid state absolutism and the source of economic welfare for all.

Christian Science to Deal With 'Truth'

A lesson sermon for all Churches of Christ Scientist, tomorrow is "Truth."

The Golden Text is: "Thus saith the Lord; I am returned unto Zion, and will dwell in the midst of Jerusalem: and Jerusalem shall be called a city of truth; and the mountain of the Lord of hosts the holy mountain." (Zechariah 8:3).

Among the citations which comprises the lesson sermon is the following from the Bible: "And Jesus went about all Galilee, teaching in their synagogues, and preaching the gospel of the kingdom, and healing all manner of sickness and all manner of disease among the people." (Matthew 4:23).

The lesson sermon also includes the following passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "Truth has no consciousness of error. Love has no sense of hatred. Life has no partnership with death. Truth, Life, and Love are a law of annihilation to everything unlike themselves, because they declare nothing except God." (P. 243).

Federal Council Mourns Soderblom

A communication from the Federal Council of Churches laments the recent death of Archbishop Soderblom of Sweden. Of this Swedish bishop the Bulletin says:

"His leadership in the movement for a larger Christian unity among the evangelical forces of the world found its fullest expression in the Universal Christian Conference on Life and Work, held in Stockholm, in 1925. As is implied in the name of this world conference, in which Dr. Soderblom played one of the most important parts, his interest in Christian unity was not ecclesiastical but intensely practical. He was convinced that the unity which the world needs will not be secured through attempts to agree upon formulations of doctrine or forms of worship and government, but rather through an ampler recognition of the common purposes which the churches now have and upon definite programs of united service growing out of this common purpose."

Vacation School Comes to an End

Yesterday with exercises and with an exhibition of handicraft work done by children during the months of June and July, the Dudley Street Church vacation school came to an end. The various halls and schoolrooms were crowded with interested visitors, some of whom bought articles the children had made. The school has been one of the most successful ever held by that church.

The Rev. L. L. Aber, director of religious education and evangelism, of Rhode Island, will preach tomorrow, both morning and evening. His topic will be "Evangelism a Fellowship." In the evening his topic is to be "How Can Christianity Win?"

ST. FRANCIS STATUE

San Francisco—Ground will be broken for a monument to St. Francis of Assisi, patron of the Third Order of St. Francis, according to present plans. ZIONISTS ARE PLEASED WITH NEW HEAD

Nahum Sokolow, the newly-elected head of the world Zionist movement, is spoken of as representing a "new era" in the history of rehabilitative effort in Palestine. He is quoted as being in harmony with the policies of his predecessor, Dr. Weizman. Sokolow will do what he can to bring reconciliation with the Arabs, and will co-operate with the mandate power—England. While he is said to be inclined to treat the Lion's tail occasionally, in his boyish exuberance, especially as he speaks before Zionist meetings, he is credited with wisdom enough to understand what is, and is not, possible.

Of the new leader, the American Hebrew says:

"All those who are interested in the reconstruction of Palestine, having no special political or economic axes to grind, will welcome with elation the news of Nahum Sokolow's election."

Rev. George A. Mark at Arlington St.

"A New Name" is the topic chosen by the Rev. George A. Mark for his sermon before the Unitarian Church at Arlington St. Church tomorrow morning at 11 o'clock. Mr. Mark is on of three Scotch brothers known as Mark one, two and three. He has made a place for himself along the Eastern Massachusetts seaboard parishes through his keen intellect and brilliant preaching. Mr. Mark was brought up in a Methodist lay preacher's family near Glasgow. His religious outlook was changed from that of Methodism to Unitarianism through reading the works of Carlyle and Emerson. A fine introduction to Unitarianism. In 1910 he came to America, and since living in this country he has held pastorates in Roxbury, Cohasset, Somerville and Leominster. His theological training has been in Meadville Theological School, Tufts College, Crane Theological Seminary and Harvard Divinity School. He was a Phi Beta Kappa student at Tufts. Mr. Mark has also had considerable business experience.

WHEN MAN ROASTS WOMEN HARK TO WEDDING BELLS

By HELEN ROWLAND

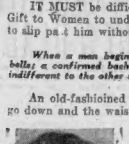
IT MUST be difficult for a man who thinks he is God's Gift to Women to understand why so many of them manage to slip past him without pausing for a second look.

• • •

When a man begins roasting women, listen for the wedding bells; a confirmed bachelor is too sure of his immunity and too indifferent to the other sex to waste time talking about them.

• • •

An old-fashioned woman is one who watches the skirts go down and the waistline go up with a tremulous sigh, and secretly prays that bustles, high-button shoes and pompadour rolls won't come back to torture her before she dies.



HELEN ROWLAND.

• • •

The more intoxicating the summer love affair, the worse the headache when you discover that it was just a combination of moonlight, imagination and cocktail parties that was "making the world go 'round."

• • •

Give the first mate time to season and the first marriage time to "jell" before you take them back to the Exchange Desk and trade them in for a new set of troubles, problems and disillusionments.

• • •

Some girls would never feel actually "married" without at least five bridesmaids, a twenty-pound wedding cake and their photographs in all the newspapers.

• • •

When a man says he's "through," he's through. But, when a woman says she's "through," that is usually the point where she takes a fresh start and begins the argument or the campaign all over again.

• • •

The first time she marries, a girl wants a show-wedding, with a crowd of witnesses to her "triumph"; but, at her third offense, she wants just as few people present as possible to throw it up to her afterward.

• • •

Clothes do not make the woman—but they make the men LOOK at her.

Shock of Cold Bath May Be Harmful

By DR. R. S. COPELAND

IN ANCIENT Rome bathing was a luxury enjoyed by the rich. Modern civilization no longer considers it as a luxury, but as a necessity.

Dr. Copeland

The popular idea about bathing has changed a lot since the days when Rome was in its grandeur. It has changed more even within the past half century.

At one time it was believed daily bathing was injurious to the health. This opinion undoubtedly arose because of some mere superstition or unsound advice. Even the doctors were opposed to frequent baths.

Just as it was advised to protect against night air, so did our grandparents warn against night bathing. In fact, it was believed by many that baths should only be taken upon certain days and at certain times. Perhaps this is how the customary Saturday night bath came into vogue.

Fortunately, modern plumbing, crowded environments and the substitution of knowledge for mere superstition, have changed our ideas covering baths.

Since the body waste is carried off through the skin, bathing is most essential for good health. This is best accomplished by the liberal use of lukewarm water and plenty of soap. Cold baths are not as cleansing as warm baths. But soap is absolutely necessary for removing accumulated dirt from the skin.

Nothing is more relaxing and comforting than a warm tub bath before going to bed. This is a simple cure for many cases of insomnia.

Allow me to warn you against cold baths if you are unaccustomed to them. Above all, if you do not enjoy cold bathing, do not indulge in it on the theory that it is health building. It doubtful that it is.

Be Young, Says Miss Fairfax

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I seem to have a weakness for falling in love with someone younger than myself, but this time I am really serious. Several years younger than I am, he did not seem to mind the difference until lately. He comes to every one of a while as a sort of barri , otherwise he seems to care a great deal as well. I would be ha a to give him up. Must I?

R. G. L.

DEAR R. G. L.—The trouble probably is that you've been stressing, in your own mind, this question of differences in ages too much. Unconsciously you've probably dwelt on it, talked of it, and made the young man conscious of it. If you continue this friendship, try to ignore the question of age entirely. The best way to keep young is to be vitally interested in a number of things. Don't sit in a corner and rust.

The Beauty Box

IF YOU go to the grand party and find there an old friend of yours strutting about with blue hair, or purple hair, or maybe green hair, don't do a fainting. It is only a temporary arrangement that she got at her favorite beauty shop. Here's the way the trick is done. The coiffure is waved and put in place. Over the hirsute glory is sprayed a fixative or foundation lotion. Then a colored powder is dusted on. Next day the proud beauty goes back to the shop, has her locks brushed thoroughly, her hair is its natural color once again.

GRAND HOTEL :-: By VICKI BAUM

Dancer Has the Baron Checked

NEVER AGAIN, she thought, never again. She stumbled on as though haunted by this thought. There was no grace left in her movements. She had no control over her body and it drooped forward at every step. Her hands were cold, as she now felt for the first time, and she began to search for gloves in the pockets of her old cloak. This was quite absurd, because for eight years past she had worn this cloak only behind the scenes as protection against the draughts that blow through every theater in the world. In her mind's eye she saw Hagn machinery and iron doors with red lamps above them, and the stage sloping away at her feet.

Never again, she thought, never again. The old-fashioned cloak was long. It hid her costume, but it hindered her movements. She turned aimlessly into quieter street. She saw a Buddha in a shop window as she passed by. His quiet gilded bronze hands seemed as though they wished to bring calm to her crumbling world. Never to dance again!

Never, never again. She tried to gain comfort from consoling words, but they came in sobs from her throat. "Sergei," she cried, "Gabriel, Gaston." She called on the names of her old sweethearts. Anastasia, too, her daughter, and finally even Pompon, her little grandson in Paris, whom she had never seen. But she was still alone with no one to console her. Suddenly she stopped with a start. What am I doing, she thought. I have run away from the theater, I can't have done that. It isn't possible. I must go back. A church clock struck 11 slowly. Grusinskaya took her hands from the pockets of her cloak and let them fall in front of her. The gesture re called the death of the wounded dove. Too late, the gesture said. The performance must be just ending. Grusinskaya threw back her head and found that she did not know where she was. She saw a small entrance framed in blue and yellow electric lights and over it the words: "Russian Bar." She went across and stood at the door. She blew her nose like a child while she made up her mind. Russian Bar, she thought. Suppose I go in? They would recognize me, and the red-skirted orchestra would play the Grusinskaya Waltz. What a sensation.

No sensation whatever, she thought wretchedly a moment later, I can't go in looking as I do. And perhaps I shouldn't be recognized any longer. Besides, if they did recognize me—looking as I do now—tant pis tant pis.

She signaled to an old rattle-trap of a taxi and, with a face that was suddenly fixed and cold, had herself driven to the hotel.

Gaigern stood like a sentry between the curtains and the lace hanging in the room No. 68 and waited for the men in blue overalls down below to finish their job. They had been for fire and pincers and they called out to each other with much zeal, but till the lights did not go on. Consequently the whole front of the hotel was all the better illuminated by the arc lights in the street, by the lighting of its five entrances, and by the electric signs opposite which advertised now a brand of champagne, now a variety of chocolate. Moreover, Gaigern had not been standing there waiting more than 20 minutes before the door of No. 68 opened. The light was turned on and by the very modest illumination peculiar to hotel bedrooms he saw Grusinskaya enter.

The shock went through Gaigern like cold steel. What on earth was the woman doing in the hotel at 20 minutes past 11? What could you do when you could not even count on the length of a theater performance? Gaigern had a dread of bad luck. And now what but bad luck could account for these casual complications in which he seemed to be trapped? The light from the room penetrated the lace curtain behind which he stood and imprinted the shadow of its open work pattern on the floor. There was nothing for it but to calm himself and keep his heart up. The string of pearls in his pocket had taken in the warmth of his body. They ran like peas through his fingers. For a moment it seemed to him idiotic and absurd that this handful of pearl-colored grains should be worth a fortune. Four months of lying in wait, seven meters of risk of his life, and no sooner was one risk over than a new one took its place. One danger after another. His life was nothing but a string of dangers. And the 117 of the Grusinskaya was a string of pearls. Gaigern shook his head and laughed in spite of the fix he was in. Gaigern was no thinker. Life often made him laugh with satisfied amazement, and most simple-mindedly, for it was somewhat beyond his comprehension. Now, at any rate, he pulled himself together and, turning towards the room behind the lace curtain, he proceeded to wait.

First Grusinskaya stood motionless for nearly a minute in the middle of the room just below the glass-shaped hanging light and it seemed from her that she had lost herself. She stood there till her cloak fell of its own weight from her drooping arms, and then she stepped over to the telephone on the table. It was a minute or so before she got the theater and Pimenov.

To Be Continued Monday.

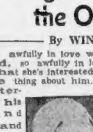
'Visiting Wife' Proves to Be the Office Pest

By WINIFRED BLACK

JEAN IS awfully in love with her husband, so awfully in love with him that she's interested in every single thing about him.



She's interested in his aunts and uncles and cousins.

She's crazy about his old photographs, when he was a baby, and when he first went to school, and oh, the one in his first long pants, she thinks is just too darling for anything.

If Bob reads Winifred Black a new book Jean reads it, if he makes a new friend, she can't rest till she meets the friend, and she's even desperately interested in Bob's work.

Now that's very nice, isn't it? But here's the trouble, Bob works in a very busy office, with a very large force of men and constantly there's extra work to do, and Bob has to work nights and what do you think Jean does?

She takes her knitting or what ever she calls her knitting and puts it in a nice little bag and goes down to Bob's office, and sits by Bob for company, and Bob was tickled to death—at first.

He thought it was so sweet of Jean to like so much to be with him, and he thought it was awfully intelligent of her to be so interested in his work.

But the other fellows in the same office didn't seem so pleased.

The first time Jean came, they said nice things to her, and found a comfy chair for her, the second time they just nodded and grumbled something about being busy.

And now what do you think those fellows are planning to do? Every one of them is going to bring his own wife down to the office the next time there is night work, and when the office manager sees that, something rather embarrassing is going to happen.

I'm sorry for Jean, but I'm not a bit sorry for Bob. Jean doesn't know any better, but Bob does—or he ought to know better. Why should he think that his wife isn't in the way in a place where any wife on earth is in the way?

There's always a wife or two in every organization who has to be taught to mind her own affairs, in her own place where she belongs and to keep away from her husband's office and let him alone when he's being paid to give his whole time and attention and energy to somebody else.

The "Visiting Wife" is sister to the "Managing Wife," and somebody ought to be kind enough to tell every young wife that her husband has no use for her while he's at work—not if he's the right kind of a man with the right kind of an interest in his job.

Poor Jean, she ought to know better—but she doesn't.

So she'll have to learn—and learning things of that sort is sometimes rather a bitter business.

Sandwiches to Tickle Palate

By MARTHA LEE

I'D PART with my pet, and very necessary, pivot teeth before I would with my electric sandwich toaster, if I didn't know where I could buy another. Whenever I'm stumped to know what to serve for Sunday night suppers, luncheons, porch parties, or plain back yard meals, I know that if there's some bread in the house and a few scraps of leftovers I can turn out some luscious toasted sandwiches with the remnants.

Martha Lee

For instance, instead of minced ham sandwiches, add a few chopped olives to the mixture and just enough dressing to make it of the right consistency to spread. Butter the outside of the slices only and toast to a rich golden brown.

The next chicken you have, save the giblets and boil in salted water until tender. Put through a meet grinder together with a hard-boiled egg. Add ½ tsp. of Worcestershire, ½ tsp. of salt, 1 tsp. of catchup and 1 tbsp. of cream and mix thoroughly. Spread a thin layer of this giblet and egg mixture on the lower slice of the sandwich and cover with the top slice. Butter both alices on the outside and toast to a golden brown.

Yours faithfully,

The Murder of the Choir Singer

By ANTHONY ABBOT

COLT NOW instructed Lentzinger to gather the oilcloth and the tools and take them to the Bureau of Criminal Identification for special examination by Williams before finally turning them over to the property clerk at headquarters.

"There is just a chance," explained Colt, "that a finger print might be found, and you realize, Dougherty, that fingerprints on any of those tools would be damaging."

At this moment the telephone rang. Colt strode across the damp oilcloth and lifted the receiver. His conversation was both enigmatic and exciting.

"Yes, Inspector Lengel . . . Quick work . . . Who told you this? The insurance man? . . . Oh, you did confirm it . . . Norfolk? Well, it's worth looking into. Will you please call the chief of police at Norfolks, Virginia, and send him down there. Tell him to talk to the doctor and nurse. Also tell Hutchinson to fly down to Norfolk and check up personally. Get them to telephone me if they get anywhere."

"What was all that about?" demanded Dougherty.

"I have started a new line of inquiry," replied Thatcher Colt.

Before the district attorney could reply we heard the slam of a door and the noises of excited feet, bounding up the stairs. Suddenly before us appeared Detective Perkins, one of Lengel's most trusted men. Out of breath, and flushed from running, he saluted Colt, and said:

NEW LINE OF PROBE

Two minutes of sharp, staccato questions from Thatcher Colt and of excited demands from Dougherty brought out the fact that Sergt. Perkins had exaggerated his news.

He had not found a witness who would testify to having seen the man and woman slain.

But he had found a witness whose testimony was so grave in its implications that Dougherty could hardly stand still.

"Mrs. Blanche Rubble."

Colt turned quickly.

"Bring her here at once."

Sergt. Perkins hastened off to fetch for us the woman who kept the tea-room and told fortunes as an extra attraction for the customers. Meanwhile, Colt, Dougherty and myself went out to the lawn behind the house and sat down in wicker chairs. The fresher air from the river at this gloaming hour was indeed welcome after the heated oven-like rooms of the murder house, but the atmosphere was still hot, moist and still.

ANOTHER NUT

"Do you believe this latest story, Thatcher?" asked Dougherty.

His question was a natural one. In every sensational murder case the police are annoyed by persons who come forward with extraordinary testimony, even sometimes to the point of confessing to the deed themselves, when in reality they know nothing of the crime and have had nothing whatever to do with it. Consequently, while we suspended our judgment on the witnesses found by Detective Perkins, none of us expected very much.

Receiving only silence for an answer Thatcher Colt carefully filled his pipe and Dougherty leaned back in his rocking-chair, knitted his fingers over his middle, and gave himself up to a seraphic contemplation of the river and its lights. In the almost idyllic quiet of dusk we remained for perhaps 10 minutes, when the kitchen door suddenly opened and Detective Perkins led toward us one of the largest women I have ever seen.

The witness who towered before us in the increasing gloom of twilight was a dark, sallow complexioned creature of solemn and yet good-natured appearance. She had large, bright blue eyes and hair of deep black streaked with silver. Under a long and enveloping black cape which she now threw back, she was wearing a fantastic kimono of red silk decorated with all the signs of the horoscope outlined in glittering brass spangles.

Colt motioned toward a wooden bench set against the wall, manifestly the safest seat for this giantess. With a girlish flutter of her jumbo arms, she seated herself with adipose grace and smiled at Thatcher Colt.

"You wanted to quiz me, Mr. Colt?" she asked archly.

From the strident tones which her immense size led us to expect, Mrs. Rubble's voice was sweet and captivatingly feminen. Over the telephone she could have been entrancing.

"The District Attorney and I are naturally interested in the story you told to Detective Perkins. I should like to get the facts from you in your own way, if you don't mind."

"I don't mind saything any more. Go ahead and quiz me," urged our witness.

"Will you give me your full name?"

"Blanche Rubble."

"Address?"

"837-A E. 50th st., just around the corner."

"Married or single?"

"Married three times—husbands all buried—single, ne-cessitarily."

"What is your nationality?"

"I am a gypsy—Rumanian."

Colt declared that this was a manifest fabrication. Mrs. Rubble's accent was as American as corn fritters.

"More of a quadroon than a zingaroo," was the way he summed her up later. But now, without comment, he went on with his questions.

"And I understand that you know something about the lives and deaths of the Rev. Dr. Beazley and Mrs. Saunders?"

"I do. Funny thing, too, Mr. Colt, these murders have almost made me lose faith in the cards."

A LOVE SICK PAIR.

"How is that?"

"Why, many and many's the time I've told the fortunes of that love-sick pair. I told them every which way.—Mother Shipton, Madame Normand, Criscross Acce—all the different systems of telling fortunes by cards, including the ancient Tarot method that hardly anybody knows any more. And, would you believe me, every time I tried them the cards spelled happiness and joy and long life to the two of them. Can you beat it?"

"Quite disconcerting," agreed Colt. "So much is being debunked these days. We never know what great truth will next crumble to dust in our hands."

"And that's the truth!" agreed the over-sized Mrs. Rubble tragically.

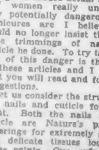
Beauty of Nails Lost by Close Trimming

By MISS HUDDLESTON

CONTINUING our series on the pitfalls of grooming cuticle:

If you patronize a beauty shop don't insist upon deeply cut nail corners and upon having the cuticle around the nails trimmed too close. The pointed cut in the reading article this often leads to infection, and yet it is almost impossible for the manicurist to follow such instructions without brushing the tissues and, at least, scratching the cuticle, even though you may not be deep enough to induce actual bleeding.



Josephine Huddleston

If women really understood how potentially dangerous such manicures are I believe they would no longer insist that such close trimmings of nails and cuticle be done. To try to inform you of this danger is the object of these articles and I do hope that you will read and follow the suggestions.

Let us consider the structure of the nails and cuticle for a moment. Both the nails and the cuticle are Nature's protective coverings for extremely sensitive and delicate tissues located at the tips of our fingers. Our eyelashes are another of Nature's protective measures, serving to keep dust and foreign objects from entering into and irritating the eyes. We wouldn't think of trimming our lashes to a point where they were disabled from performing their duty. WHY? Because, sometime through the ages, sweeping, luxuriant lashes were decreed a thing of beauty and loveliness. Therefore we daily dip, brush their growth and incidentally strengthen their protective value.

The nails and cuticle are just as important to the delicate structure of the fingers as the lashes are to the eyes. Nails that are too long break off easily and cuticle that is too coarse and heavy is apt to induce roughness and hangnails. Consequently, untrimmed nails and cuticle can offer as dangerous a source of infection as those which are manicured too closely. On Monday I will continue this discussion of manicures.

Clara Soon to Be Back in Films

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS

Los Angeles, July 25—September will see Clara Bow back on the screen. She has been having a session with her dentist and having gotten rid of two abscessed teeth her physicians believe they have located her trouble.

Meanwhile Clara has refused two amazing offers from Hollywood producers. She doesn't want to start a picture until she feels so well there isn't a chance of her having another breakdown. A New York publishing firm offered to publish the story of her life, which she will write herself in her own language.

Louella O. Parsons

Sylvia Sidney and Peggy Shannon, two girls who were put into Clara's shoes because they looked like her, have certainly profited. Peggy Shannon was taken to the projection room and told to imitate Clara. No one could do that, and Miss Shannon soon saw in order to succeed she must be herself.

Miss Sidney, who came here from the stage, is replacing Miss Shannon in "Ladies of the Big House," a story written by Ernest Booth, an inmate of Sing Sing prison, convict. "The Road to Reno" will keep the other Bow successor busy, since the change in leading ladies.

Time none of these stunt fliers got a break! They risk their necks doing all sorts of daredevil deeds and the best they ever get is to double for some star or to be a part of an air fleet. Radio is reversing this situation by helping Dick Grace turn author. They have bought "The Last Squadron" from him. He, perhaps, has done more stunts than any flier in the world. "Hell's Angels," "Wings," etc., etc., are a few of his screen accomplishments. Ricardo Cortez will step into the lead and I'll bet every cent I have that Dick Grace will double for him in all of the air stunts. That is nothing against Mr. Cortez, for what one of us would want to risk our necks if we didn't have to?

The Lawrence Tibbett fans will be happy to know that there will be plenty of music in his next picture. Dorothy Fields and James McCue who are writing the music have put in a number of typical Tibbett songs which were promptly okayed by Irving Thalberg when he reached his desk. There is also every likelihood that Irving will give his approval to W. S. Van Dyke as the director. Lupe Velez who is coming all the way from New York to emote opposite Hollywood's favorite baritone is waiting in the East for the arrival of Gary Cooper. Lupe's Gary who has been traveling in Europe remains in New York until he finishes "Sal o' Singapore" and Lupe has no intention of waiting two months to see her boy friend.

Then he questioned her about her weight, height and so on; noted she was blonde, and informed her she had all the screen points and ought to be able easily to pass a sound screen test.

Miss Falvey was invited by Mr. Bancroft to be in on the television broadcast to the Leviathan through station WIXAU. After he and the major had finished, Miss Falvey went before the "mike" and photo-electric cells. She sang three numbers very effectively, and screened the best of any of those taking part. Mr. Bancroft later complimented her, stating that a career looked promising for her.

Eddie Mayo and Gang feature a stellar, highly entertaining variety bill on the stage. The reception accorded the appearance of this famous aggregation of youthful harmonica virtuosos, who have only recently returned from European triumphs, is proof of their Rub popularity. Individually and as a group they are heard in a repertoire of harmonica arrangements with riotous comedy sidelights.

Also registering a hit on the bill are Danny Duncan and company in a novel romantic comedy sketch. Edith Bow in a round of character and topical song numbers and Al Stone and Anne Lee in a comedy song and dance offering afford pleasing entertainment. Maxine and Bobby in their canine novelty complete the bill.

Bowdoin Sq.

Sky Hath No Star Quite So Luring

By HARLEIGH SCHULTZ

Constance Bennett, true to form physically and histrionically, may be counted on to bring the feminine fans swarming to RKO Keith's this new film week, while one scene alone looks like a sure magnet to attract the men. In her latest, "The Common Law," Miss Bennett is cast in her usual acting mold, but in point of being revelatory, outdoes all previous performances in getting down to nature's charm!—it's in the studio scene.

As assured additional appeal for the women, Miss Bennett most alluringly does the peacock act in costumes out of a generous wardrobe. That the story is often slow in action, with overmuch speech, are handicaps. Another drawback is the failure of the star to step out of the rut made by the tailoring in the studios to give opportunity to her sophisticated style and her ability to wear snappy clothes perfectly. On this box office side of the balances, "The Common Law" has burning love and allied sentiments, plus down-to-bedrock feminine poise that leave little to be imagined.

Harleigh Schultz

Our mention of the studio scene suggests the story's course. At the start Miss Bennett is seen as a sugar daddy's darling; but she seizes him off nonchalantly and takes on an artist in the Latin quarter of Paris. All through the ups and downs of bliss the new sweetheart is gentle, big heart and hand in hand; for reasons of her own, the lassie won't marry the artist, preferring to roam where she will in affection's green pastures. But it all ends happily.

Miss Bennett ranks the same as in her recent movies. Joel McCrea is rising, and probably will prove adorable to the lady fans. Robert Williams and Lew Cody do well enough. The photography is excellent; the direction, fair.

Italian Movie at Fine Arts

The Fine Arts theater is presenting a Pirandello story based on the novel "Silence." The picture "La Canzone dell 'Amore," translated into English as "The Song of Love." It was made in Italy and has some of the leading Italian stars in its cast.

Elio Steiner, the male lead, has played in "Railroad," "The Golden Lane" and "Marilon." These three productions have been most successful in Italy.

Dria Paola, the woman lead has been connected with Pittaluga for the last two years, going there direct from the stage.

"Son of India" Packs the Love Lure on the Screen at State

By HARRIS MORGAN

Ramon Novarro does a whirlwind job for love and love's sacrifice, in "Son of India," feature film at Loew's State. With the beauteous and capable Madge Evans to inspire him to new deeds that will captivate all his admirers, and please fans generally, Novarro finds his role fitting him like a well tailored suit. It's a stirring screen narrative, with abounding romance and adventure. It is finely acted, directed and photographed, and the settings are super-excellent.

* * *

The plot concerns a young Hindu who is left beggared when his father, a rajah, is killed and robbed by bandits. He has managed to save one huge diamond, but when he tries to sell this to a disreputable dealer, the scoundrel charges him with theft of the gem. Novarro is about to be railroaded to prison when he is rescued through the intervention of a young American, played by Conrad Nagel. Subsequently, Novarro falls in love with an attractive American girl. On an exciting tiger hunt their friendship ripens into infatuation.

The girl turns out to be the sister of the man who had saved Novarro from prison. When Nagel comes from America to stop the marriage of his sister to a man of another race, the story is brought to a climax.

Madge Evans, the New York stage star, plays the heroine and offers a performance which combines charm and capable dramatic work. Super's portrayals are also offered by Nagel, Marjorie Rambeau, C. Aubrey Smith, Mitchell Lewis, John Miljan and Nigel de Brulier.

Season Opens in Two Weeks

The Colonial is being put in condition for the opening of the new season on Monday, Aug. 10, with Schwab and Mandel's latest musical production, "Free For All."

Schwab and Mandel promise something different in comedy and music entertainment in their new show. These young producers have been pioneers in the various styles of musical production. They believe that audiences are tiring of the introduction of choruses, who have no tangible relation to the body of the comedy, but are simply shoved on the stage to interrupt the story and permit the stage crew to change the stage settings. So they will try to give theatergoers "a comedy with music" in which principals take the place of choristers, in which every girl has a definite part in the show, and in which every song and dance grows naturally from the action of the comedy.

FANNING

By GEORGE UNDERWOOD

Meet Jim Browning. His Uncanny Shafts. Pins 'Em With Legs.

Has Bothner Faded. Joe Stecher, Also. He's in Big Show

Jim'll Juggle 'Em for Xmas Basket Fund

With legs alone we saw him tip Sheridan off his pegs
And pin the giant athlete's broad shoulders to the mat
With hands and arms unaiding—now whatyn think o' that!
And limbs of steel had Stecher, as rugged as an oak,
When Stecher clamped the scissors, 'twas all up with a bloke
But this quaint cove, Jim Browning, can fade them both for fair,
With legs he juggles rivals in ways that raise your hair.
He doesn't like Joe Stecher, crush muscle, nerve and bone,
He lifts and whirls and throws 'em, all with his legs alone!

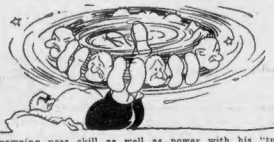
Until we saw Jim Browning, the giant Missouri farmer, spin Joe Malcewics around with his legs, like one of those Japanese jugglers do the big ball and barrel, at the recent Grosscup-Pishon show, we thought we never would see a wrestler use his legs with the amazing skill and cleverness of the veteran, George Bothner Browning's sensational leg work, particularly the use of his pet "turnover scissors," was an eye-opener. We got almost as much of a "kick" watching Browning wrap those powerful limbs around Malcewicz, lift him up, whirl him around and pin him writhing to the mat, as we did in watching the stirring duel between DeGlane and George for the world's heavyweight championship. One of the side matches we most anxiously await when DeGlane and Sonnenberg clash in the Grapple of the Century at Braves Field, next Thursday night, will be the Jim Browning vs. Jack Wagner encounter. Practically all the grapplers who took part in the recent Grosscup-Pishon show will be seen in next week's bigger Xmas Basket Fund tournament and some new mat stars will be tossed in for good measure.

Joe Stecher was a master with the scissors hold. But the Nebraska cornhusker never dreamed the scissors could be developed into the sensational "turnover" as used by Browning. Joe bent all of his energies into the squeeze. When he was developing his scissors Stecher used to spend hours with legs wrapped around a sack of oats and applying powerful pressure with his thighs. When Joe was in his prime opponents seized with his famous scissors imagined themselves in the grip of a boa constrictor.



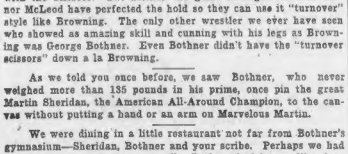
Browning uses skill as well as power with his "turnover scissors." He can apply the same deadly pressure exerted by Stecher and he does things Joe never dreamed of doing. Stecher had to get an opponent in certain positions before applying the scissors. Browning gets the scissors and then lifts, turns and pins opponent by use of the legs alone!

Like Stecher both Ed George and George McLeod are adept with the scissors. But neither the giant Michigan football star nor McLeod have perfected the hold so they can use it "turnover" style like Browning. The only other wrestler we ever have seen who showed as amazing skill and cunning with his legs as Browning was George Bothner. Even Bothner didn't have the "turnover scissors" down a la Browning.

As we told you once before, we saw Bothner, who never weighed more than 135 pounds in his prime, once pin the great Martin Sheridan, the American All-Around Champion, to the canvas without putting a hand or an arm on Marvelous Martin.

We were dining in a little restaurant not far from Bothner's gymnasium—Sheridan, Bothner and your scribe. Perhaps we had dined not too wisely, but too well. Bothner had been telling how most of the wrestlers fail to take advantage of their legs. George said the average wrestler might as well have both legs amputated as far as getting any good out of them. Sheridan, in a joshing mood, said no wrestler would suffer if his head was lopped off also.

"A wrestler has to use more brains than you think, Martin," rejoined Bothner. "I'll tell you what I'll do. I'll bet you 20 bucks I can throw you without putting a hand or arm on you."



Naturally the giant all-around athlete accepted the defi. Who wouldn't? How could a 135-pound man toss as great an all-around athlete as the giant 200-pound Marvelous Martin Sheridan without the use of hands or arms? Bothner showed us how it could be done.

We went to Bothner's gym. Sheridan and Bothner stripped for action. The minute they got on the canvas Bothner, grinning, dropped to the mat, saying: "See, I'm almost down now, Martin. All you have to do is to put me the rest of the way."

As Sheridan leaned over to seize the smaller man, Bothner kicked one of the giant's legs from in under him. As Martin came toppling down George wrapped one of his legs about Sheridan's waist with toe under armpit in a peculiar leverage fashion, shot his other foot under Martin's chin and with a quick thrust turned Martin over on his back. In a twinkling of an eye there was Sheridan with shoulders pinned squarely to the mat! Bothner had not put hand or arm on him!

In his palmy days George Bothner never could use the "turnover scissors" like Jim Browning. It'll be worth the price of admission alone to see Browning in one of the accompanying matches to the Grapple of the Century at Braves Field next Thursday night. Browning will flash the "turn-over." Ed George the "Wolverine slam," Zaryoff, the Cossack, will charge in like a ram, Stasiak, Lutze, Micaluso will all be in there, too.

Gus and DeGlane in final—what a show'll be staged for you!

AS DEGLANE SEES SONNENBERG AND GRAPPLE OF THE CENTURY

HEYDLER BACKS UP UMPIRES

New York, July 25 (AP)—John Arnold Heydler, president of the National league, has come to the rescue of his much-abused staff of umpires.

Returning from a trip around the western half of the circuit, the National league prexy put himself on record to the effect that he thought the umpires had done an exceptionally fine job in the recent series of hard-fought games between pennant contenders in the West.

"The umpires have leaned backward to avoid ejecting anyone from the game or the park," said Heydler, "but there are well-defined limits that must be observed."

The new ball has made the umpire's task much more difficult this year, in Heydler's opinion.

"The new ball has speeded up defensive play," he said, "and resulted in more close decisions. It has stimulated pitchers, who now are using floaters, knucklers and other deceptive deliveries instead of just a curve or a fast ball."

Advice to Yachtsmen

By MYLES T. McSWEENEY

"Dear Sir: Your unreliable and unappreciated misinformation on sports is very welcome to nobody. I have just bought a yacht. Will you be kind enough to refrain from telling me how to sail it?"

Answer: Have you a pair of water wings?

First, hire a congressman to sit behind the sails. Get him talking when you are becalmed. He'll drive the boat at 60 miles an hour.

Bring along a hammer so you can "tack" if you have to.

Sell yacht.

Read a good book.

Heave the anchor, mates!

JAEGER FACES FAST FIELD

Charley Jaeger, winner of the classic Golden Wheel two weeks ago, will go out to show that his victory was no mistake when he rides in the 50-mile Golden Wheel revenge race tonight at the Revere Cycle Track.

Points will count toward the American motor-paced championship, and for that reason a race crammed with thrills and spectacular "jams" is almost sure to develop.

Among Jaeger's opponents are Franco Georgetti, the Italian and present champion; Franz Duelberg, German; A. Letournier, colorful little Frenchman, and Freddy Spencer and Jimmy Walthour.

Nat Butler has arranged one of his strongest preliminary cards of the year with shorter races for both amateurs and pros.

Lessons in Wrestling

THE LEG SPLIT

DYNAMITE GUS SONNENBERG, who meets Henri DeGlane, world's champion, in The Grapple of The Century, next Thursday night—It's at Braves Field and part of the proceeds will go to the Xmas Basket Fund—today shows you how to use the punishing leg split. From the look of agony on the face of JACK ALBRIGHT Dynamite Gus is putting on the pressure. Now go home and try it on the piano.

By GUS SONNENBERG
AS TOLD TO GEORGE GRIMM

LESSON 7

In previous lessons we have pointed out that there are two classes of holds—the punishing and the pinning. There are few holds that can be used for the same purpose.

The outstanding, I think, is known to wrestlers as the "split," and grasping the other at or below the knee, start stretching your body.

If properly applied, this hold, primarily a punching grip, can be turned into a pinning hold, if the leverage is placed correctly.

This has a tendency to force the opponent to his back or on one shoulder. As the leverage is applied, you start rising slowly, slipping one leg down on the leg of the other fellow and raising the other leg above your shoulder. The opponent by this time is experiencing some pain, as you may well imagine.

In order to attain this advantageous hold, a wrestler must bring his opponent to the mat before it can be applied. Once you have your man down, there are various ways of securing the hold, the usual procedure being to get one of his legs between both of yours

The continued pressure on his legs has a tendency to make him forget to try and protect himself, except to keep his shoulders off the mat.

While he is squirming his shoulders, place one foot on his ankle and rise to a height where you can push your shoulder against his upraised ankle, then start putting on more pressure. If you have the proper leverage, your opponent is bound to rest both shoulders on the mat, or slap the floor in token of defeat.

Mickey Will Get Next Shot at Heavy Title

Chicago, July 25—(US)—"I'll be in Chicago within two weeks with a formal challenge to Max Schmeling for a fight with Mickey Walker for the world's heavyweight championship, to be held within any time limit designated by the National Boxing Association, and I'll back it up by posting a forfeit in whatever sum the N. B. A. may require."

That is the statement made by long distance telephone by Jack Kearns, Walker's manager in reply to an interview with Gen. John V. Clinnin in which Clinnin expressed the opinion that Walker has earned his right to title bout with the champion and that Chicago is the logical place to hold it.

The message from Kearns was relayed to Gen. Clinnin, who, as president of the N. B. A., as well as chairman of the Illinois commission, means to keep in close tab on Herr Schmeling's future matchmaking.

For, under the rules of the association, if Max doesn't defend his title against a real contender by January 3, he'll forfeit it. And that's where Walker comes in.

"We'll be very glad indeed to talk business with Kearns," said Gen. Clinnin. "If he means business and will post a reasonable forfeit to prove it, we'll see that the champion either accepts the challenge or relinquishes all claims to the title in all National Boxing Assn. territory—and that's covering considerable ground.

Schmeling Will Be Obliged to Fight

"In case of a default by Schmeling, the ranking contender—in this case Walker—would be ordered to meet a suitable opponent within six months after the default by the champion, the winner of that bout to be recognized in all N. B. A. territory as the holder of the title."

"But suppose Schmeling, on the plea of injury or something of the sort, should request an extension of time, would he get it?"

"No, sir. The present champion can't get by with that stunt again."

3 SWIM TITLES AT STAKE TODAY

Three New England swimming championships will be settled this afternoon at Ell Pond, Melrose, where the park commission of the city of Melrose plays host to one of the finest groups of swimmers gathered together this season. The first race begins promptly at 2:30 p. m.

The major titles at stake are the New England A. A. A. U. senior 220-yard freestyle and the senior 220-yard backstroke championships for men, and the junior 880 freestyle crown for women. In addition to these races, two open events for women and one for men, and four events restricted to residents of Melrose are scheduled.

The entry list includes the greatest number of the best swimmers in this section of the country. Practically every prominent child in this section will be on hand.

The field for the men's senior 220-yard freestyle championship is impressive, with such stars as John Osipowich, national junior half-mile champion; Clinton Osborne, schoolboy sensation; William Squires of the Boston Swimming Association; John Stasas and Arthur Broadhurst of the Whitin A. C.

Jockey Won't Ride; Track Loses $10,00

Arlington Park, Ill., July 25 (INS)—Arlington Park track was out about $10,000 today, that sum having been refunded those who bought mutuel tickets yesterday on Ironsides, which was left at the post when Jockey George DePeso refused to ride.

R. F. Lawrence's Skal Reaches Port

Plymouth, Eng., July 25 (AP)—R. F. Lawrence's yacht Skal, an entry in the transatlantic race which was won by the Dorade, put in during the night, making harbor in a gale with rains so heavy that searchlights could not penetrate the darkness. She was not officially timed.

COCHET-BRUGNON BEAT BRITONS IN CUP MATCH

FRANCE NOW HAS 2-1 DAVIS CUP LEAD

Roland Garros Stadium, Auteuil, France, July 25 (AP)—France today took a lead of two matches to one over England in defense of the Davis Cup, international tennis trophy, as Henri Cochet and Jacques Brugnon defeated the English youngsters, George Hughes and Charles Kingsley, three sets to one. The scores were: 6—1, 5—7, 6—3, 8—6.

The victory in the doubles makes France the favorite to retain the cup they took from the United States in 1927.

The remaining two singles matches will pit Cochet against Fred Perry, sensational 21-year-old English player who upset Jean Borotra yesterday and Borotra against H. W. (Bunny) Austin. Cochet is expected to defeat Perry.

The doubles were harder fought than was expected, especially after the withdrawal of Perry to save him for the singles tomorrow, but Cochet and Brugnon always were able to rise to the occasion when the Englishmen became dangerous.

After running off the first set 6—1, Cochet became erratic and before he and Brugnon could get their strokes to working the English youngsters had won 7—5.

Cochet Dominates Play in Third Set

Cochet dominated the play in the third set, smashing and volleying with his old-time fire, and Hughes and Kingsley never had a chance. Hughes was doing most of the court covering for the English, as Cochet was for the Lyons master, and the set went at 6—3.

Without waiting for a rest they started the fourth set, with the Englishmen palying superbly. Cochet and Brugnon seemed disorganized and Hughes and Kingsley quickly ran up a lead of four games to one. Here the veteran French pair rallied, brought it up 4-all, then 5-all, and 6-all and finally broke through Hughes to take a lead and then go ahead to win 8—6.

The match was played under threatening conditions and on a damp court. President Doumer, because of the weather, did not appear and the galleries were slim.

Fight for Cricket Lead Listed Today

The Massachusetts State Cricket League has a full schedule of games carded for today, with the feature attraction billed at Lawrence, where the Arlington Mills and West India A, joint leaders, will battle it out for undisputed possession of top place.

Locally, the three games scheduled for Franklin Field will attract the majority of the fans.

Beaudians vs. Athletics, Wanderers vs. Windsors and West India B vs. Mystic Lodge are the contests carded at the Dorchester crease.

St. Georges and Brockton will clash at Glendale Park, Everett.

GOOD GOLF

By CHESTER HORTON

Often a golf fault has its almost direct opposite—and the opposite is not the correction in some instances. For example, the opposite of topping is slicing which means hitting the ball high into the air. I have always cautioned you never to overdo anything to make corrections, and that warning could hardly be repeated often enough, restricting your swing radius, by which is meant lifting the club directly upward and thus altering your angle of tilt in the club's path, causing topping, just so will skying be caused by overdoing the correction, straining to reach far out to the right with the club in the back swing. After all, your arms have a limit to their reach. To go beyond that you will have to lean out your whole body, which means weaving, also lack of pivot. Then when the club is returned to the ball it scoops underneath it—and the lofted flight is the result. Be natural always—the instant you struggle with your club something is wrong somewhere, and the chances are it's within you.

DEGLANE IS CONFIDENT OF VICTORY

By JACK CONWAY

Henri DeGlane, world's heavyweight wrestling champion, intends to return to France for a visit following his title mat battle with Gus Sonnenberg, which will be staged at Braves Field next Thursday night under the direction of Paul Bowser.

DeGlane will return to the scene of his boyhood. He also plans to visit the battlefields of France. During the war, DeGlane drove trucks to the front which were loaded with red wine for the French soldiers.

DeGlane is the first Frenchman to ever win the world's heavyweight championship. He won the title when he defeated Strangler Lewis in a tussle at Montreal.

The Frenchman has entrenched himself at Pine Grove Inn, Marlboro, where he will do public training for his title skirmish with colorful Sonnenberg. DeGlane will use the same training quarters he had for his recent winning contest with Ed Don George.

"I believe I convinced the fans I am a real champion by the way in which I defeated George," said DeGlane. "When I won the world title from Strangler Lewis, I declared I would give all legitimate challengers an opportunity to meet me. I first took George as he had a win to his credit over me."

DeGlane Confident He Will Keep Title

"Now I shall face Sonnenberg who defeated me twice before I won the title. I feel I was not in the best of physical condition when I previously met Sonny. I also did not have a very effective defense against Gus' flying tackle. I now have such a defense as I proved in my bout with George. I shall try to score a decisive win over Sonnenberg. Then I shall make a trip home to my beloved France where my countrymen wish to extend to me a welcome. I shall go back in America in the fall prepared to continue my policy of meeting all comers."

Sonnenberg is training in secret. The old Dynamiter does not wish to give the DeGlane spies an opportunity to get a line on the style of attack he plans to use in the championship contest.

The former titleholder is in the best of condition of his career. He has been winning steadily since he dropped his title to George on the coast last Winter. Gus is of the opinion he will regain his lost laurels next Thursday night.

Sonnenberg intends to make a postponed honeymoon trip to Honolulu.

NURMI BREAKS 2-MILE RECORD

Helsingfors, Finland, July 25 (AP)—Bald-headed Paavo Nurmi has given the world's greatest distance runners something new to think about just when they had decided the "Finnish Phantom" was about through.

Paavo accomplished a feat that most track experts thought impossible when he ran two miles under nine minutes yesterday. Nurmi was timed in 8:59 6-10 for the distance, bettering Edvin Wide's world's record of 9:01 4-10 by one and eight-tenths seconds. Paavo had to run that fast to beat two companions, Lahtinen and Virtanen, both of whom were caught in times faster than Wide's record. Lahtinen's time was 9:00 5-10 and Virtanen's 9:01 2-10.

If Nurmi's mark is accepted by the International Amateur Athletic Federation, the famed Finn will hold 12 recognized world's running records.

His name now is in the book as holder of the one, three, four, five and ten-mile records, and, in metric distances of the 3000, 5000, 10,000 and 15,000-meter marks, as well as for one-hour running in both miles and meters.

James Brooks Wins Westchester Tourney

Rye, N. Y., July 25 (AP)—Jane Brooks of Nyack, N. Y., today won the Westchester invitation golf tournament for the second straight year, defeating Frances Williams of Allentown, Pa., 4 up in the final round of 18 holes.

Robins Recall Pitcher Gallivan

New York, July 25 (AP)—The Brooklyn Robins today recalled Phil Gallivan, right handed pitcher, from the Hartford Club of the Eastern league. Gallivan, who was with the Robins at the start of the season, will report in Cincinnati next Monday.

Who Will Win Grapple of Century?

DR. LYNDE GATELY—"I believe DeGlane will leave the mat world's champion. The world's champion possesses more skill and science than some people seem to think. I believe his wrestling brains will keep the title safe from Sonnenberg."

CHARLES KEALOS—"Sonnenberg will regain the world's championship. Dynamite Gus has regained his best form. He is in the proverbial pink. When Sonnenberg is right, he is unbeatable."

RED SOX FACE TIGERS HERE TOMORROW

By JOE CASHMAN

The Detroit Tigers, greatly improved since they last appeared here, return to town tomorrow to play six games in four days with our Red Sox.

There will be a doubleheader at the Wigwam on the morrow, the first under the new law which permits baseball from 1:30 to 6:30 p. m. on the Sabbath, and single games Monday and Tuesday, and a twinbill on Wednesday, all at the Fens.

The outcome of these tilts will be of little interest to the rest of the league, but will mean much to the contending teams, for the Red Sox, in sixth place, are only two games ahead of the Tigers, in seventh, and each has ambitions to climb at the expense of the other.

On their first visit to Boston early last month, the Bengals were in a big way. Their two outstanding stars, First-baseman Dale Alexander and Second-baseman Charlie Gehringer, were on the injured list, the pitchers were all off form and the hitters were all in a slump. They couldn't possibly have been in any place but where they were—deep in the cellar.

Tigers Battling to Displace Sox

Soon after, though, Alexander and Gehringer returned to the lineup. The punch they added to the attack pepped up the rest of the boys and it wasn't long before the Junglers were up in sixth. They stayed there until early this week, when the Sox knocked them into seventh.

Putting them down is one thing and keeping them down is another, according to the Harrisonen, and they promise to prove this to the satisfaction of local fans by climbing up past the Sox again in the coming engagement.

Since the Tigers happen to be one of the two clubs in the circuit which the Sox have the edge on to date, the natives aren't worrying much about the enemy's threats.

The Browns' flock dropped two out of three in its first series with the Bengals in Detroit but licked them twice here and then split even in a four-game engagement out West, which gives it a 5-to-4 edge up to now.

The last-place Chicago White Sox will play the fifth, final and rubber game of the current series at the Fens this afternoon. Big Bob Kline will hurl for the Red Sox and Hal McKain for the Pale Hose in the battle for the all-important edge.

The visitors evened the count by winning the fourth game, 3 to 1, Vic Frasier outpitching "Hod" Lisenbee in a great hurling duel before a banner Ladies' Day crowd.

GREATER HUB GIRLS IN MEET

Jersey City, N. J., July 25 (AP)—The nation's finest woman track and field stars gathered at Pershing Field here today to battle for eleven national championships.

The defending champions to take part are Mildred ("Babe") Didrikson, Dallas, Tex., baseball and javelin throws; Stella Walsh, Cleveland, 50-meter hurdles; Lillian Copeland, Olympic Club, Philadelphia, high jump; Mary MacDonald, Boston, shotput, and Evelyn Farrar, Illinois W. A. C., discus throw.

Diamond Dust

By JOE CASHMAN.

The Braves will conclude their four-game series with the Cubs in Chicago this afternoon. The Warriors must win to get an even break as well as to remain above the .500 mark in the standing. Fred Frankhouse is Manager McKechnie's choice for mound duty while the Bruins will rely on Bobby Smith, former Tribal ace.

Ben Cantwell held the Hornsbymen to five hits in the third game of the engagement but his mates could collect only four off Charlie Root and the Braves were beaten 3 to 1. Urbanski and Sheely, each of whom made two singles, were the only Braves to hit safely.

The world's champion Philadelphia Athletics won their 11th straight game by beating Cleveland 2 to 1 in a contest that was rained out at the end of the sixth inning and, by so doing, increased their lead in the American League race to 10½ games, as the Senators were idle.

The Yankees staged a three-run rally in the ninth to nose out Detroit and are now only three games back of second place.

Brooklyn made 21 hits but lost its second straight game to the Pirates, 8 to 7, and dropped to 8 games back of the league-leading St. Louis Cardinals, who took two with the lowly Phils. The Giants also lost to the Reds and are now 9 games back of the roof. The champions appear to have their second straight National League pennant as good as won.

Earl Webb hit his 44th double of the season in the third game against the White Sox. It was his lone safety in three times up.

Fat Robert Fothergill played left field for the White Sox yesterday. Lou Fonseca having reported with a sore leg, and while he didn't make a hit, he turned in the fielding gem of the afternoon a running sliding catch of a drive by Bill Sweeney in the third inning.

Bob Rich, 15-year-old pitching ace of the Diamond A. C. of East Boston, won first prize in the finals of the Boston Park Department pitching contest held at Fenway Park before the third White Sox-Red Sox tilt. Francis Smiegel of the Shamrock Jrs. of Hyde Park was second and Robert Sullivan of the Chipewa A. C of South Boston was third.

New York, July 25—Ray Miller, veteran left-hook artist from Chicago, knocked out Vincent Marraconda of New York in the sixth round of their 10-round bout at the Long Beach Stadium last night.

Miller weighed 134½ pounds; Maraconda, 133½.

MRS. MOODY, MRS. HARPER BATTLE

Manchester, Mass., July 25 (AP)—Mrs. Helen Wills Moody, former national tennis champion, and Mrs. Lawrence A. Harper of Oakland, Cal., were to meet today in the final of the Essex County Club's invitation tournament.

Mrs. Moody, who coasted into the final round with a string of straight-set victories, routed yesterday, while Mrs. Harper came from behind to defeat Marjorie Morrill of Dedham, defending champion. Mrs. Harper dropped the first set, 2—6, but rallied to take the next two at 6—3.

A victory for Mrs. Moody today will give her a fourth championship in the Essex County Club event.

In the doubles final today Dorothy Andrus of Stamford, Ct., and Virginia Hillery of Philadelphia will meet Mrs. Marjorie Gladman Van Ryn of Philadelphia and Josephine Cruickshank of Pasadena.

Mrs. Moody Accepts Helen Jacobs' Challenge

New York, July 25 (INS)—Mrs. Helen Wills Moody has accepted the challenge hurled at her by Miss Helen Jacobs, pretender to her throne as world's champion, it became known today.

Vernon S. Prentice, president of the Seabright Lawn Tennis and Cricket Club, announced that Queen Helen has forwarded her entry blank for the 44th annual Seabright tournament, which begins next Monday, for both singles and doubles play.

Miss Moody has been seeded No. 1, to a No. 2 ranking for Miss Jacobs. If they both come through their early-round matches as expected, they will meet for the historic Seabright bowl in the final round next Friday.

RECORD SET AT HIGHLAND

By BILL GRIMES

Judging from the first day's attendance, the three-day Highland Country Club open 18-hole handicap medal play tournament, which started yesterday, will establish a new all time record.

More than 100 Massachusetts and Rhode Island golfers played Highland yesterday. After the recent lean years, which the Attleboro club has experienced, the first day turnout was a revelation, for which the new committee, one of the most up and coming in the state, is wholly responsible.

Most of the low handicap and many of the higher players from Rhode Island were in action at Highland yesterday. Teddy Mancook, one of the best left handers in the country, and Mike Bobal, recently reinstated to the amateur ranks, were the first Little Rhody stars to put in an appearance.

Although Hancock has not played as much golf as usual this season, he turned in a fine round as did Bobel, who is recognized as one of the three outstanding players in his State tied with Hancock.

TITLE SOCCER TILT TOMORROW

The Clan McGregor and Beacon A. C. soccer elevens will clash tomorrow at Franklin Field in a play-off contest for the Boston and District league title which carries with it the Thomas Grieve cup and gold medals for the winners.

Both will have their big fullback, Jack McDonald back in harness and the big boy's presence may be the difference between defeat and victory.

Aboard Submarine Nautilus, Devonport, Eng., July 25—The Nautilus is again shipshape and ready to start this afternoon on the second preliminary stage of its voyage under the ice to the North Pole.

The next stage of our voyage takes us from Devonport, near Plymouth, to Bergen, Norway, where we will give the Nautilus its final outfitting for its conquest of the ice fields.

The main engines, which have been holding us up, are now said by Engineer Shaw to be in as good condition as we can expect.

Before leaving Plymouth, Sir Hubert was presented with the Scottish Geographical Society's Livingston Gold Medal for 1931-32 in recognition of his scientific work. He previously had received a gold medal from the Royal Geographical Society of Italy.

WORKINGMEN IN PROSPERITY LOAN PLEA

Petitions to Hoover Signed by Thousands at Mass Meetings on the Common

Officials of the Workingmen's League of Suffolk County today were to mail to President Hoover a petition signed with thousands of names urging the adoption of the proposed $5,000,000,000 "Prosperity Loan" plan suggested by William Randolph Hearst as an unemployment relief measure.

The petition was circulated last night at the first of a series of mass meetings to be held on Boston Common in support of the proposal to end the unemployment crisis by floating a $5,000,000,000 government bond issue for the construction of public work.

Congressman John W. McCormack of South Boston, the principal speaker of the evening, sounded the keynote of the drive in support of the "Prosperity Loan," advocated nationally by the Hearst papers, with the declaration that President Hoover should call a special session of Congress in the fall to consider the adoption of the relief measure.

MARK OF POPULAR SUPPORT

"This is not an isolated meeting," the congressman said. "It is the earliest manifestation of the popular support which is bound to come to Mr. Hearst's proposal.

"It will be known throughout the nation that historic Boston, through its workingmen, says that the $5,000,000,000 loan is necessary.

"In times of such economic stress as this country faces today, the government should speed up its public works to provide employment to which workingmen, as citizens, are entitled.

"When private business collapses, it is incumbent upon the government to prevent a reign of chaos.

"The proposal for the 'Prosperity Loan' is the first worthwhile suggestion which has sifted through the welter of investigations and blame formulation of commissions since the blight of economic depression settled over the nation.

ASKS FOR SPECIAL SESSION

"I consider the suggestion of Mr. Hearst of sufficient importance to warrant the calling of a special session of Congress this fall to pass upon it."

Another speaker was James H. Brennan, member of the governor's council, who also urged the voters of Metropolitan Boston and Massachusetts to join forces in support of the proposal.

"The old axiom about charity beginning at home is most appropriate to our national situation," the councilor said. "Not that relief by such a measure could be construed as charity. It would be merely the award to American citizens of their right to earn their living through the construction of essential public works.

TUNE TO BE "NATIONAL"

"It is time that we abandoned internationalism in economic affairs. The government of this country should be intensely national when the question of the economic salvation of its citizens is concerned."

Other speakers included Augustus Reaver, president of the Workingmen's Club, Louis Brasso, representing Mayor Curley, Wendell Thorp, "father of the old age pension bill," Theodore A. Glynn, former city fire commissioner, Representative William Pendergast of Charlestown.

The meeting endorsed unanimously a resolution offered by the ex-service men's branch of the Club endorsing the prosperity loan.

The date for the next mass meeting will be set at a meeting of the executive committee of the club to be held Thursday.

GRAF RESUMES ARCTIC HOP

Berlin, July 25 (AP)—The dirigible Graf Zeppelin, with a scientific party aboard, arose from Staaken airdrome this morning and pointed her nose into the rising sun, bound for Leningrad on the second leg of her flight to the Arctic.

A few hundred early risers shouted "Hoch" and "Gute Reise" (good journey) as she cut her ground connections and, after circling the field hit her course to the east.

The crew had rested a short time after completing the first leg of the flight from Friedrichshafen to Berlin.

Incoming weather reports indicated the Graf would have excellent weather on the flight to Leningrad. Dr. Hugo Eckener, in command, expected to arrive there late this afternoon.

N. H. Society to Show War Posters

Concord, N. H., July 25—Otis G. Hammond, director of the New Hampshire Historical Society, today revealed that after 17 years of tireless amassing, he has an unequalled and valuable collection of original World War documents.

In making the announcement, Maj. Hammond said he was preparing the data for an exhibition which the society will soon sponsor, and which will shed new light on World War events.

Curb Market Has but Narrow Range

New York, July 25—Wave of selling which swept the Curb market seemed to have spent what little force it had in the short session, and the list held generally steady today. Grains Are Lower in Chicago Market

Chicago, July 25 (INS)—Grain prices were under pressure again today and closed the short session weaker. Trade continued light. Final prices for wheat were off ⅝ to 1⅛c; corn, ¼ to ⅝c down and oats ⅜ to ⅝c lower. Rye was ½c lower. Oats, July, scored a new low for the season during the session.

GOODYEAR HELD BY TRUSTS

August Maturities Total $56,043,740

New York, July 25—Corporation bonds and notes falling due next month total $56,043,740, there was a $59,856,380 total for July. August 1930 figure was $68,827,950. Of the amount maturing railroad bonds total $9,080,950, public utility issues $23,111,290, and industrial issues $23,851,000.

STOCKS HEAVY IN WALL ST. DEALINGS

New York, July 25—Stocks in Wall st. dragged through a slumberous short session with a somewhat heavy tendency today.

Losses generally ranged from minor fractions to little more than a point. Bonds were fairly steady, save in the foreign division where prominent issues declined. Stock sales held around the recent five year minimum, with a two hour turnover of roughly 400,000 shares.

BIG TRADERS AWAY

With prominent traders mostly out of town, price trends were without much significance. It was notable, however, that U. S. Steel, which lost 3 points yesterday in response to widely published reports that the dividend would be reduced next week, encountered no further selling of importance and closed off only a small fraction.

National Biscuit was a soft spot, selling off nearly 2 points. Although this company earned all but four cents of its dividend requirement for the first half of the year, the fact the upward curve of its earnings was interrupted for the first time in 14 years, seems to have been used as a bear argument.

Miscellaneous issues losing a point or so included American Telephone, American Can, Bethlehem, Eastman, American Water Works, Allied Chemical, Mathieson and Case. Gains of about a point were shown by Public Service of N. J., Stewardt Warner and Studebaker.

The last-named was helped by advance estimates indicating that its second quarter earnings report will show an improvement over the like period of last year, largely through reduction of expenses.

STEEL OPERATIONS UP

Although some of the chemicals were again somewhat heavy, it was reported that the International Nitrate Sales Cartel might be rescued after its recent collapse.

The estimate of the Youngstown district steel operations for next week indicated a sharp gain from a week ago. Next week's output was placed at 42 per cent of capacity, against 34 a week ago, and 41 per cent currently.

Report from Paris that sterling exchange had risen sufficiently to make further gold takings from London unprofitable was received favorably here, but it was felt in international banking quarters that the real test will come next week.

R. I. Deposits in Banks at New High

Rhode Island State Bank Commissioner reports that total resources of all Rhode Island State banks, trust companies and savings institutions were at a new all time high on June 30. Total resources of all savings banks on June 30 were $193,612,714, as compared with $187,891,619 a year ago; trust company and state bank resources amounted to $352,624,289, as against $347,969,515.

Ward Baking's Net Amounts to $741,888

Ward Baking Corp. reports for 27 weeks ended July 4 net profit of $741,888 after interest, depreciation and federal taxes, but not including reserves for contingencies and advertising set up, but not spent, during this period amounting to $387,632. This compares with net profit of $948,548 after charges and taxes in the 27 weeks ended July 5, 1930.

$18,866,250 Gold Is Sold to France

London, July 25 (INS)—The Bank of England today sold $18,866,250 worth of gold, most of the yellow metal going to France. The exchange rate of the pound sterling showed signs of improvement.

French deposits in London were estimated today at $750,000,000, at their peak, and it was estimated $200,000,000 of this amount had been withdrawn during the past 10 or 12 days.

Springfield Firm Is Suing Aluminum

Bausch Machine Tool Co. of Springfield has filed suit in United States district court at New Haven against Aluminum Company of America, seeking $9,000,000 damages. Plaintiff charges defendant with monopolizing aluminum business. Aluminum Company of America will suspend operations at its Niagara Falls plant about August 1, because of slack business.

Atlantic Fisheries Are Run at Loss

Atlantic Coast Fisheries Co. reports for year ended April 30, 1931, net operating loss of $659,401, against net income from operations in 16 months ended April 30, 1930, of $407,941 or $1.33 per share on the 288,808 common shares after allowing for dividends on preferred to date of retirement.

Associated Gas Has Net of $46,373,954

Associated Gas & Electric Co. reports for 12 months ended June 30 gross, including other income, of $111,415,068, against $106,546,383 in the previous 12 months. Net after taxes and depreciation was $46,373,954, against $47,807

Pea Pack Reduction for Year Is 42 P. C.

Total United States pea pack for 1931 is estimated at 13,000,000 cases, a decline of 42.2 per cent from 22,500,000 cases in 1930, according to the Wisconsin Canners' Association.

Today's News of Live Stocks in Wall St.

With no encouragement either from foreign or domestic conditions, it was but natural that the entire market should respond to the unfavorable forecasts made with respect to the steel dividend.

The steel action is the most important domestic action in the entire financial and industrial situation. Pending outcome of the meeting, there is no disposition in would-be bullish quarters to resume aggressive activities in the market.

Uncertainty Is Felt on Merger Prospects

Some uncertainty concerning the outcome of the oft-rumored consolidation of Montgomery Ward and Sears Roebuck has been inspired by knowledge that the chief executive of Sears who probably is its largest individual stockholder is seriously ill.

Pullman Selling Is Out of Strong Boxes

Selling of Pullman out of strong boxes is reported taking place this week. Some time ago the stock was widely touted, but never did a great deal. The outlook then was for large competition from the air and an increasingly bad outlook for increased demand by the hectored rails for the manufacturing subsidiary.

United Corp. Buying Is for the Long Pull

Buying of leisurely nature is noted in United Corporation whenever the stock reacts in price. Such demand is almost exclusively for the long pull.

New York Central Is Near to Buying Point

Rather thin market exists for New York Central at present but buying of most impressive nature takes place on price reactions. Buying described as "the best in a decade" wwas attracted to Central on its last decline below current levels.

McKeesport Tin Earnings Estimates Are Revised

Falling-off in tin plate demand from leading can makers is causing downward revision in McKeesport Tin Plate earnings estimates. Accordingly, belief now is that final half net will be considerably less than the $4.23 euivalent reported for the first half. Calculations are that for the year the company will show between $6 and 7 a share for the common, against $8 previously predicted. Talk of smaller extra dividends is being heard in certain quarters. Company now pays $4 regular and $1 extras annually.

Continental Can Net Equals 1930

Semi-officially it is learned Continental Can earnings are running close to the 1930 equivalent of slightly more than $5 a share on the common. Company issues only one report annually, so that any attempt to forecast probable first half results would be purely guesswork. It can be stated on reliable authority that Continental Can's management is not greatly concerned over the reported drop in tin plate buying and regards this as entirely seasonal. Last six months is normally the best half of the year because final estimates are available in that period of the total vegetable and fruit crops, which guides can makers in determining their production schedules.

Sidelights of State Street Finance

State St. having been dependent on the foreign situation for its gossip, is at a loss as to what influences are now of the greatest importance. As a matter of fact, there are not many coming events worthy of holding the spotlight. The Steel meeting is the standout and the financial district, lacking anything definite in the way of advance news, has turned the whole procedure into a guessing contest.

Those who align themselves on one side or another seem to be assuming unnecessary risks, if they do so in order to decide on which side of the market they will make their commitments. Experienced tape readers are of the opinion the action of share prices in recent sessions promises little for the immediate future and fresh commitments are not worthy of the risks involved.

The attitude of a large Boston trader, felt to be the most important operator at present in the market, is considered a good guide for those in doubt as to the best market policy they could adopt at this time. He is said to feel sure Steel will pay the regular dividend, yet, he is not making any attempt to stir things up at the moment.

One of the shrewdest traders in the commodity markets points out that September corn is now selling below July contracts. This is unusual as it should ordinarily sell at a premium. However, it has been used as a hedge against purchases of other commodities so much that he thinks traders have lost track of the actual conditions prevailing in regard to the visible supply of corn.

The 1930 crop was in every respect a short one due to drouth and the unwillingness of farmers to sell what they felt they might need for themselves. Consumption for the current year has been heavy. He is convinced that those short September corn, the contract traded before the new crop, are likely to discover they cannot get corn to deliver because of a shortage. He is advising the purchase of September corn, now selling a few cents above the low price.

$1,000,000 Canada Plant Is Planned

McKesson & Robbins, Inc., of Bridgeport, Ct., has decided to erect Canadian branch factory in Montreal at an initial investment of over $1,000,000, it is understood.

While the desire to extend the Canadian market was the primary purpose for the move, it is understood another incentive is to counteract the increased tariff rates levied on drugs and patent medicines by the Conservative government.

Bond Market Dull, Changes Are Mixed
